Norway Has Broken With Neighbors to Join Alliance, Lange Says

Sweden Isolated, Denmark 'On Spot' As Norse Seek Security With West

Oslo, Feb. 21 (NYHT.).—Foreign Minister Halvard M. Lange said flatly today that Norway, in her search for security, has broken away from Denmark and Sweden in favor of joining forces with the West in the North Atlantic defense alliance.

Lange told touring American reporters that a list-minute effort by Denmark to build Scandinavian unity in a neutral three-nation league has failed and that Norway is going her own way.

The decision isolates Sweden and puts Denmark in the position of having to choose between isolation and following Norway into the alliance. Although both countries fear Russian reaction, Denmark is regarded here as likely to join the alliance, leaving Sweden alone.

Will Discuss Pact With Reds

Norway, which has a common border with Russia, has yet to answer a Russian request made two weeks ago for a treaty of nonaggression. Lange said the question is to be discussed possibly this week or next. A widely held opinion here is that Russia will invoke her treaty with Finland to occupy that country, thus moving farther west.

The attempt to revive the idea of a Scandinavian League outside the Atlantic pact was made by the Danish Foreign Minister, Gustav Rasmussen, attending a political conference here with leaders of the other two governments. Sweden has insisted that a Scandinavian League maintain strict neutrality while Norway was willing to consider only a league tied to the western democracies. The two countries told Rasmussen yesterday, Lange said, that nothing has occurred to change either position.

Nazis Killed Faith in Neutrality

Lange said Norway lost her faith in neutrality in the years between 1940 and 1945, when she was invaded by Germany.

The 46-year-old Foreign Minister cautioned that Norway's participation in the Atlantic alliance still depends on action by the Storting (parliament), in which a debate is scheduled probably Wednesday.

However, his Social Democratic (Labor) Party, which holds more than half the seats, indorsed his policy on the alliance yesterday and only the Communists with 11 seats out of 150 oppose him.

Lange returned a week ago from Washington and London. American and British officials told him, he said, the effect of an isolated Scandinavian league to discourage aggression would be less than that of the wider alliance, and besides military equipment is scarce and could not be immediately forthcoming outside the North Atlantic alliance countries. "This cleared up the situation," Lange said. " . . . so we turned to the pact. If you heard reports we returned to Oslo empty-handed or downhearted, it simply isn't true."

Military Obligation Not Pledged, Commons Told

London, Feb. 21 (AP).—Minister of State Hector McNeil told the Commons today that no nation engaged in the North Atlantic Pact talks has yet committed itself to any military obligations.

McNeil thus answered a Laborite questioner who asked for assurance no commitment to automatic military action would be accepted by Britain.

When asked by Communist Philip Piratin for assurance that Britain would not be committed to automatic military action in the event of war between the United States and Russia, McNeil said only that the pact would not conflict with the United Nations Charter.

By Byrnes Board

Drafting of Men Recommended To Fill Up Guard and Reserves

Drafting of young men into the National Guard and Organized Reserves to fill up their still skeletonized combat units was recommended last night by a top-level civilian-military board.

The group, headed by former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, proposed new "realistic" strengths for the two civilian components totaling 1,054,300 officers and men.

They did not propose federalization of the National Guard. This controversial question was within the board's purview but not put up directly to them for recommendation, officials said.

Without going into details, the report said:

"In case of the National Guard we must secure the continued active cooperation of the States, who have contributed and are contributing to it so heavily. Without their support, the guard, of course, could not exist. They have made possible the heroic record which the National Guard has written into our country's history."

Proposed "troop basis" totals of 475,000 for the Guard and 579,300 for the Reserve were recommended by the Byrnes group. Prior authorized strengths — approved at the end of the war and based on expectancy of passage of universal military training—contemplated forces close to twice this size.

The report—delivered to newspaper offices at 9:30 last night—recommended that the "Selective Service law be made applicable to the Reserve components" to assist them in reaching the strengths proposed. A spokesman for the Department of the Army told The Washington Post that the Byrnes board had proposed amending the draft law to permit filling up the Guard and Reserve ranks with

Witness Fails To Fix Voice as Axis Sally's

Inge Doman May Have Had Invasion Drama Role, Beckman Says

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

The implication that Inge Doman, statuesque blonde German wartime radio announcer, had broadcast some of the propaganda programs attributed to Miss Mildred E. (Axis Sally) Gillars, was aired in District Court yesterday.

On the witness stand at the time was Emil Beckmann, former writer of Nazi scripts beamed to British Empire sections.

Beckmann, a former night student at McKinley High School here, had been flown from Germany upon request of the defense.

Listens to Playback

The witness, donning earphones, listened to a recorded playback of "Vision of Invasion," a horror propaganda play broadcast from Germany depicting the death of an American soldier on a torpedoed invasion vessel.

(Earlier witnesses had testified that Miss Gillars had played a leading role in the drama.)

"Were you able to identify any voices in that program?" inquired Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin.

"No," replied the witness.

After Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr., during cross examination drew the admission that static may have interfered with voice identification, the prosecutor ordered the playing of another propaganda record—one found among Miss Gillars' effects in Germany. Earlier witnesses had identified the voice in the recording as that of the defendant.

Might Have Been Another

The playback was clear and unmarred by static. At its conclusion, Kelley asked Beckmann if he recognized "the voice in that recording."

"It might have been Inge Doman—and it might have been Midge," Beckmann blandly replied.

(Government witnesses had testified that Miss Gillars had been known as "Midge" on the German network.)

(Miss Doman had appeared during the opening days of the treason trial as a Government witness. She had identified Miss Gillars as the leading figure in a number of broadcasts while declaring that she, herself, had been merely an announcer, introducing the programs.)

Beckmann, who had been interned here as an enemy alien at the outbreak of the war and returned to Germany some time later, declared during the morning session that Miss Gillars had been "forced to work with records." The Government contends these records contained propaganda.

He testified that explicit instructions were given all German radio broadcasters that they must conform with policy and that he was told by Horst Cleinow, radio official, "One false utterance and you'll be put away."

Beckmann said he was not sure that Miss Gillars received the instructions but he said every employe was supposed to get them.

After Beckmann had testified as to guards patrolling the studios from which Miss Gillars and others broadcast, Kelley asked:

"Who was the very first person you saw when you visited me," at the Justice Department, "when you arrived in Washington February 11?"

"A guard," Beckmann replied.

After Kelley elicited the infor-

NLRB Finds Free Speech Error in Act

Guarantee Ruled Invalid in Case of Secondary Boycott

In a 3-2 decision the National Labor Relations Board yesterday ruled that a provision of the Taft-Hartley Act guaranteeing free speech to unions is invalid when it comes to secondary boycotts.

Chairman Paul M. Herzog, who voted with the majority but filed his own opinion, described the case as the "most important" to face the board since the Labor Relations Act was passed in 1947.

In a second major decision the NLRB unanimously ruled that General Motors was guilty of an unfair labor practice under the Taft-Hartley Act in moving to change its group insurance program without first consulting the United Auto Workers (CIO).

The GM ruling backed up earlier board decisions that pensions, insurance and health benefit programs are subject to collective bargaining.

The free speech issue rose from charges brought in 1947 by Wadsworth Building Co., prefabricated house manufacturer, and Klassen and Hodgson, house builder, against the Carpenters District Council of Kansas City, Mo.

According to the board, the union sought to force the builder

Chest Shifts Added Funds To Members

Each Will Receive 5% More, or Same As in '48, From Cut In Hospital Costs

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

The Community Chest Federation yesterday increased its 1949 allotments to member groups by five per cent over expected amounts as a result of a $200,000 budgetary windfall.

The windfall came about in two ways. Slightly more than half of the additional funds represented money "saved" by the expected shift of some 3000 hospital patients annually from Chest support to public support, as a result of the District Government's more liberal definition of indigency.

The rest of the $200,000 came from downward revision of a "bad guess" on the number of hospital cases the Chest would have to pay for this year.

Agencies Get Same Amounts

While the 1949 Chest Federation campaign made only 75.23 per cent of its goal, the "saving" in hospitalization costs allowed the executive committee to provide some 80 per cent of member chests' requests, or the same amounts they were allocated last year.

The hospitalization fund, on the other hand, received 12 per cent more than was allowed last year. The $482,460.50 fund will cover, however, only an estimated 49,940 adult patient days in District hospitals this year, against 69,480 paid for through the hospitalization fund last year. The rate of $11 a day stipulated by the hospitals for adult care compares with the $7.50 rate charged before January 1.

The federation budget was voted yesterday by the executive committee without change from budget committee recommendations presented by Frank Birgfeld, budget chairman, and Edward J. Keys, executive director of the Federation, to Daniel W. Bell, president.

Funds Use Approved

In voting the budget, the executive committee also accepted proposals of the Hospital Council with respect to the use of hospitalization funds, as recommended by the budget committee.

These included an agreement to accept Chest-certified patients at $11 a day for adult in-patients, $2 a day for clinic visits and $2 per infant day, as long as the Chest meets these payments. The hospitals agreed to take care of emergency cases even if there is no money to pay for such cases beyond the $482,460 allowed.

The Hospital Service Agency, liaison between Chest agencies and the hospitals, will be requested to keep costs of hospitalization within one twelfth of the annual budget, each month.

The Chest Federation also agreed that the shift to public responsibility of the indigent patients eligible under the recent order of the Commissioners, will be made effective immediately.

The agreement and hospital fund allocation by the Chest Federation apparently reduces the possibility of a separate drive for funds by the hospitals this year.

However, Hospital Council President Walter Tobriner pointed out later that each patient shifted from private to public support means a loss of $2 a day to the hospitals.

Hoover Asks Changes in State Dept.

Reform in Conduct Of Foreign Affairs Urged; Revamping Started by Acheson

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

Far-reaching changes in the conduct of American foreign relations were urged upon Congress yesterday by the Hoover Commission.

The changes were proposed with the full approval of Dean Acheson, who served as the commission's vice president before his appointment as Secretary of State. Most of them can be accomplished without new legislation, and Acheson is already starting to carry them out within his own department.

They involve, first of all, a sweeping reorganization of the State Department, intended in part to lighten what the commission calls the "intolerable burden" upon the Secretary and the Undersecretary.

They involve, secondly, a far more basic change in the relationship between the State Department and the rest of the 46 departments, agencies, commissions, boards and interdepartmental committees under the President which are concerned, to some extent, with foreign affairs.

Would Shed Many Tasks

If the proposed reforms are carried out, the State Department will rid itself of its present activities in the fields of aviation, shipping, petroleum, munitions exports and the issuance of visas, and will turn them over to other departments.

Every Government agency concerned with foreign affairs will set up a single officer or office, responsible directly to its secretary or agency head, to coordinate its foreign affairs activities.

All will be expected to consult the State Department on domestic decisions which may have repercussions abroad, just as the State Department will be expected to consult the others and make use of their resources to the utmost.

This, says the Hoover Commission, will require "loyal teamwork between the State Department and the other departments and agencies instead of the evasion and backbiting that characterized these relationships during the recent war."

New Cabinet-Level Committees

Finally, there will be new "Cabinet-level" committees to help the President reach decisions on issues that transcend the responsibilities of any single department.

The purpose of these changes, the report argues, is to enable the United States to exercise its new leadership in world affairs.

"The conduct of foreign affairs today," the report declares, "involves almost the entire executive branch—the President, the President's executive offices, the State Department, numerous other departments and agencies, and intricate interdepartmental machinery. In addition, it involves constant cooperation between the executive branch of Congress.

"As a consequence, the problems of organization are equally Government-wide in scope, and organization reforms must be based on definite concepts of the part to be played by each segment of the Government."

The urgency of making the proposed changes was emphasized to former President Hoover, chairman of the commission, in a letter from Henry L. Stimson, who was his Secretary of State from 1929

Tax Evasion Testimony Hints Pay-Off to Late Senator Glass

Richmond, Va., Feb. 21 (AP).—An internal revenue agent testified today that a defendant in an income tax evasion case told him he concealed over $15,000 of his 1943 income because it represented payments to or through the late U. S. Senator Carter Glass for war contracts awarded his firm.

The agent, Arthur K. Claxton, made the statement in Federal District Court during the tax trial of W. Clay Counts, Roanoke commission salesman.

Counts leaped to his feet at the testimony, asked that he be alowed to change his plea from nolo contendere to innocent, and demanded a trial by jury. Judge Wilson Warlick, of Newton, N. C., granted both requests and continued the case generally.

(The late Senator's son, Carter Glass, jr., said in Lynchburg, Va., last night that "during the whole of 1943, Senator Glass was too ill to transact any business."

("He was confined to his home at Montview until the middle of April, and upon his return to Washington that month he remained in his apartment until his death, his physicians refusing to permit anyone to discuss business matters with him."

(Senator Glass was reelected to the Senate in 1942.

(J. W. Rixey Smith, the Senator's biographer and secretary, emphatically denied the charges made by Counts had any basis.

(Now an employe of the Department of Internal Revenue, Smith said he was in charge of Senator Glass' office during 1943.

(Smith said he had never heard of Counts or the Roanoke Welding and Equipment Co. Neither the company nor Counts has ever been in contact with Senator Glass

Husband Wins Transfusion Death Award

Blood Typing Error Fatal to Wife, Jury Gives $9000 Verdict

A District Court jury yesterday awarded $9000 in damages to a 38-year-old husband whose wife, with Rh-negative blood, died 4½ hours after his own Rh-positive blood was transfused into her veins.

The damages were awarded to Paul Phillips, 2861 South Buchanan st., Arlington, in a suit against National Homeopathic Hospital, 2d and N sts. nw., which was accused of negligence in routine typing tests preceding the transfusion.

The Rh blood factor is one of many components in the blood—among the others are those which permit typing into the well-known A, B and O classifications. Those who have the factor in their blood are known as Rh positive. The others are Rh negative.

When positive blood is mixed with negative blood, the negative recipient develops blood antibodies to the Rh factor.

In such a case, the person is termed "sensitized" to the factor and further transfusions of positive blood may produce a "transfusion reaction" ranging from chills and fever to death.

It is now routine hospital procedure to test all persons for the presence or absence of the Rh factor prior to transfusion and to use Rh negative blood for Rh negative patients. The test is a relatively simple one, customarily performed by laboratory technicians in 12 to 20 seconds, according to Dr. Kenneth R. Nelson, technical director of the blood

First President To Be Honored In D. C. Area

Patriotic Programs and Parades to Highlight 217th Anniversary

The 217th birthday anniversary of the Nation's first President will be observed today with parades, patriotic programs and with wreath-laying pilgrimages to his home and resting place at Mount Vernon.

Alexandria's observation, part of the city's year-long bicentennial program, will feature the largest parade in its history and two Washington Birthday balls. The parade begins at 2:30 p. m.

At Mount Vernon, President Truman's wreath will be placed on Washington's tomb during 11 a. m. ceremonies sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Here in the city which bears the first President's name, the District Masonic Clubs will place a wreath in his memory at the Washington Monument at 10 a. m. A patriotic program will be conducted at the Departmental Auditorium at 10:30 a. m. by the Sons of the Revolution and affiliated groups.

Celebrations will have to contend with cloudy skies, occasional rain, and a maximum temperature of about 45 degrees, according to the Weather Bureau.

Federal, District and most post-office employes will have today off, and children in the District and nearby Virginia schools also will have the holiday. It will be just another school day, however, in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Md.

The holiday is expected to draw thousands of bargain hunters to the downtown shopping areas for traditional February 22 sales in many stores which will stay open at least part of the day.

While a number of area workers left the city Friday night, ap-

2 Bills Would Widen Social Security and Hike Benefits, Give Sickness Payments

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday spelled out his Social Security "Fair Deal" in two bills dropped on the doorstep of the House Ways and Means Committee.

The two Administration "musts" would greatly increase benefits and coverage in all types of social security, raise payroll taxes and add these among many new wrinkles:

1. A Federal "home relief" program, extending Federal assistance on a State matching basis to "all needy persons," as well as to the needy aged, blind and to dependent children.

2. A new Federal disability insurance program providing for payment of benefits for short periods of sickness (up to 26 weeks) and for extended periods of disability (6 months or over).

To Cover 20 Million More

The old age insurance bill would extend coverage to some 20 million more persons, including farm labor, domestic servants, self-employed persons, Federal employes not covered under a Federal retirement plan, State and local governmental employes, active members of the armed forces and others.

The maximum monthly old age insurance benefit would shoot up from $85 to $150 a month. The minimums for insured persons with a small amount of earnings would range from $17.50 for an aged widow, compared with $10 under present law, to $50 for a widow with 2 children, compared with $17.50 under present law.

Both bills were dropped into the House hopper by Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.), at the President's request. Hearings on the "public welfare" phase of the program will open Monday.

Basis for Discussion

Doughton released a letter from the President asking him to introduce the bills "in order that they may serve as a basis for consideration and discussion when your committee begins its hearings."

Not only would benefits about double for the average old age insurance beneficiary but so would payroll taxes.

The tax is now 1 per cent each for employes and employers on the first $3000 of a worker's pay. This would rise to 1½ per cent each on July 1 and further increase to 2 per cent each next January 1, on the first $4800 of an employe's wage.

For workers making more than $3000 a year this would more than double the tax. For example, an employe earning $4800 or more would pay $96 a year instead of $30 at present.

Doughton said the provisions do not necessarily reflect his own bills. In other quarters it was learned that opposition already has developed in the committee to extending the programs to farm labor and domestics because of the complicated tax collection problem it poses.

The so-called "home relief" provision of the President's bill, proposed the following top scale of Federal-State benefits for all needy persons, as well as the aged, the blind, and dependent children:

The maximum assistance payment in which there could be Federal participation would be $50 a month, or if there is more than one person in the home $50 for each of the first two persons, and $20 for each additional member of the household.

Now $50, $27 and $18

Under present law the maximums are $50 for the aged and blind, but only $27 for the first child and $18 for each additional child, and no allowance whatever for the parents.

Federal aid would be extended to the States on a basis ranging from 40 to 75 per cent of total costs, depending on the relative per capita income of the States. The State with per capita income at the national average would receive 55 per cent in Federal funds.

Among other proposed welfare aids:

Federal assistance to the States,

To Keep Them in the Groove

Yachtsmen Protest River Lights for Airport

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The CAA disclosed plans yesterday to build a 3000-foot row of aircraft approach lights in the Potomac just below National Airport—and Washington yachtsmen immediately protested.

Civil Aeronautics Administration engineers said they have completed arrangements for the installation of the new "slope line" approach lighting system at major airports but may have struck a snag in putting in the first unit here.

Washington National heads the list of a dozen airfields which will get the novel new system of guiding airplanes safely down through fog and rain. Funds are available and work will start as soon as possible—with the system expected to be in operation by summer.

General Electric designed a new sealed-beam light with double the candlepower of those originally approved for installation in the system. The CAA announced yesterday that it had been accepted.

But there may be trouble locally. The CAA wants to install the double row of lights out in the Potomac between the south end of the airport and Dangerfield Island, just off the mouth of Four Mile Run. Washington sailing men, however, have their "Marina," or sailing yacht basin here.

It's a Government sponsored project, under guidance of the National Capital Parks office of the Interior Department. And that same office has jurisdiction over other piers or installations in the Potomac there.

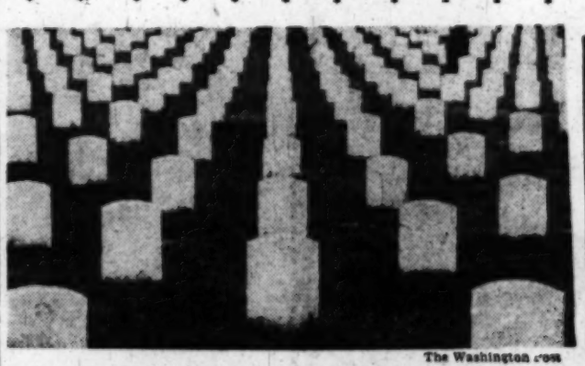
CAA has asked National Capital Parks for a permit to put up its lights. They've been assured cooperation but told to submit their construction plans before any permit is granted.

The sailing boat owners protested strenuously when the present, outmoded system of approach lights was installed in the same location—extending south into the Potomac from the north-south runway at the airport. There's only one row of these old lights, however, and a CAA spokesman said the two new rows will extend twice as far out into the river as now. The old lights will come out, however, he said.

Alternate plans call for two concrete piers carrying each row of lights or putting each of the 60 lights on separate piles. Yachtsmen fear the project may block the entrance to their "marina." Even though separate piles are used, the lights are only 100 feet apart.

Each light consists of a row of sealbeam GE headlights fastened about a foot apart on a strip of steel planking. One end is close to the ground or surface of the water and the other fastened to a post, so that the bar of lights sits at an angle of 45 degrees.

The two rows of beacons form a kind of open "V" funnel leading to the runway. When a pilot making an approach through fog or rain sees them as two continuous lines of light, he knows he is "in the groove." If he is off to the side, or too high or low, he sees each light bar separately. And they point the way to fly to correct his error.



The Washington Post

Inventor got his idea from tombstones in Arlington

Map indicates approximately where proposed lights would be placed

H. C. Cory Pearson, CAA lighting expert who designed the cheap, simple system, told The Washington Post he conceived of the idea while driving through the countryside.

"I noticed that the rows of tombstones at Arlington Cemetery and the rows of trees in an orchard appeared as spokes in a wheel at one angle and as one solid mass when directly lined up. The slope line system really is as simple as that."

CAA officials say each installation will cost about $50,000 compared with $200,000 for other types of approach aids which were considered. The latter included supersonic sound waves to coagulate fog and infrared photography.

Other cities which will get the first of the new lights are: New York (International), Newark, Boston, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Houston, Chicago, Los Angeles, Seattle, St. Louis and Nashville. Rhein-Main airport at Frankfurt, Germany, one of the main fields of the Berlin airlift, will also receive one of the installations for tests. Other Operations Vittles fields now are receiving an older system of high intensity approach lights originally ordered for Washington and other cities by CAA.

Independent Says There's Oil Surplus

A spokesman for independent oil producers contended to Congress yesterday that the world now is producing a surplus of oil, and there is no "foreseeable" exhaustion of United States resources.

This picture came from L. Dan Jones, attorney for the Independent Petroleum Association of America. He testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee at hearings on proposed extension of the Economic Recovery Act.

Jones was objecting particularly to a provision in the present ECA Act which says that oil sent to Europe for recovery purposes should be bought outside the United States if possible. Congress put it in the law with the idea that precautions should be taken against exhausting United States oil resources.

Jones said the provision benefits chiefly seven big companies.

He said these companies control practically all the oil produced in the world except in Russia and the United States.

The world shortage in oil is ended, Jones said, and instead the world today is "faced with a surplus of oil which is reflected in the United States by rapidly increasing and unneeded imports of foreign oil."

This brought from Representative Lodge (R., Conn.) the comment he found the statement one of "startling surprise."

"Your testimony is directly in opposition to testimony we have had from responsible officials in Government, including Mr. Krug (Secretary of Interior)," he remarked.

Representative Mansfield (D., Mont.) said "It seems pretty peculiar if we are producing more than we need that we are paying 34 cents a gallon for gasoline in Montana and exorbitant prices for fuel oil."

Jones said he was unfamiliar with retail pricing, and that his group was concerned with crude production.

Chairman Bloom (D., N. Y.) said he intended to present the matter to Government oil experts to get at the facts of the price, supply and resource situation.

Doubling of soft coal shipments to Marshall Plan countries was urged by D. T. Buckley of New York, an official of the Coal Exporters Association of the United States.

Even regardless of the domestic surplus, Buckley said foreign need for coal justifies increasing coal exports from one million to two million tons a month under the Foreign Recovery Act.

He cited a drop in over-all exports from the record figure of 40 million tons in 1947 to about 19 million tons in 1948. Staff officials of the Economic Cooperation Administration, he told the committee, have estimated 1949 coal requirements for European recovery at not more than 12 million tons.

Against this reduction in exports, Buckley called the committee's attention to what he said was indicated as "a vast surplus of bituminous coal productive capacity" in excess of known needs.

Production, he said, has dropped from a peak figure of 630 million tons in 1947 to about 590 million tons in 1948, with an estimated production of 530 million to 550 million tons for 1949.

President Truman yesterday asked Congress to extend the life of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs for five years.

He also asked that the institute's funds be doubled as part of his "bold new program" for development of undeveloped areas in the Western Hemisphere.

His special message was submitted to the Senate and House along with the draft of legislation providing for:

1. Continuance of the institute until June 30, 1955, with a review by the President and the Congress after five years. (It has been chartered as a wholly owned Government corporation to operate through the end of the fiscal year 1950.)

2. Fixing expenditures on all programs at not to exceed 50 million dollars for the five-year period from July 1, 1950, to June 30, 1955, instead of the current aggregate of not to exceed five million dollars in one fiscal year.

3. Basic cooperative agreements with other governments in the Western Hemisphere to run for as long as five years.

"The conditions of modern life are drawing the American republics together in an increasingly close community of neighbors," Mr. Truman's message said. "It is a basic and enduring purpose of the foreign policy of the United States to play the part of the good neighbor in that community."

Mr. Truman recalled that in his inaugural address he proposed making the benefits of United States scientific advances and industrial progress "available for the improvement and growth of underdeveloped areas."

"Within the Western Hemisphere we have already built firm foundations for this program," Mr. Truman said, "and have already begun to demonstrate the benefits that can flow from such a program."

The institute has 25 cooperative programs in operation in 16 Latin American nations. They involve public health, sanitation, education and agriculture.

How to Give Only Americans A-Bomb Protection Is Puzzler

By The Associated Press

Government officials said yesterday they haven't been able to figure out a way to tell Americans—and not everyone else—how to protect themselves against a-bombs.

Their dilemma, Atomic Energy Commission officials said, is how to spread the information in this country without letting the whole world in on it.

Commission Manager Carroll L. Wilson conceded the agency has no plan for protecting a major defense area, such as Norfolk, Va., in the event of an a-bomb explosion there.

Somewhere Else Is Best

And Commissioner Lewis Strauss commented: "The best protection is to be somewhere else when a bomb goes off."

The issue was raised by members of the congressional Atomic Energy Committee.

Representative Holifield (D., Calif.) said that since taxpayers "are paying about a half billion dollars a year for atomic developments, they should know how to protect themselves against a bomb."

Representative Durham (D., N. C.) said the information should be given out in every public school.

"If you do that," Committee Chairman McMahon (D., Conn.) said "other people will know how to protect themselves."

Wilson agreed and said that is the commission's dilemma.

Wilson said the commission is trying to induce contractors to develop "a rugged reliable instrument" to detect radiation. It would have to be capable of operation by anyone without prior instruction, he said.

The agency is now working with the armed forces on a booklet on radiation which may be out within three or four months, Wilson said.

Philippines Senate Head Ousted in Row

Manila, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Jose Avelino was ousted as president of the Philippines Senate today after a riotous session during which two fist fights broke out on the floor and a pistol shot was heard outside the Senate chamber.

Avelino was deposed during a four-hour rump session of 12 senators who charged him with illegal financial transactions said to total more than $250,000. Senator Marino J. Cuenco was named acting Senate president.

Avelino said later the session was illegal because it lacked a quorum of 13 members, but the press secretary at Malacanan Palace said President Elpidio Quirno considered the session legal and has recognized the election of Cuenco as acting Senate president.

Quirino and Avelino have been engaged in a bitter political struggle for several months.

Capture of 3 Burmese Towns Is Reported

Rangoon, Burma, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—A Burmese communique said today Karen and Communist forces have taken central Burmese towns and now appear to be driving along the road to Mandalay.

The communique said the towns captured are Pyinmana, Yamethin and Meiktila.

Going Tough For Li Effort at Consolidation

Canton, China, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Acting president Li Tsung-jen encountered heavy going today in his efforts to consolidate the disintegrating Nationalist government, and it was believed Premier Sun Fo had rejected his plea to return to Nanking.

Li postponed his scheduled departure in order to continue his talks with the die-hard Nationalist group led by Sun Fo and Chen Li-fu which has looked with extreme disfavor on Li's efforts to negotiate peace at almost any price with the Communists.

Word Lacking From U. S. Consulate in China

By The Associated Press

The State Department said yesterday more than a score of American consular officials and employes in Communist-held China have not been heard from directly in weeks.

Communications have been cut off since November 18 with 13 Americans at Mukden, Manchuria. The staff there is headed by Consul General Angus Ward.

(News dispatches from Nanking said travelers from Mukden reported Chinese Communist soldiers are stationed within the American consular compound. They said Ward and his staff are not allowed outside communication.)

The United States Consular staff at the north China port of Tientsin has been out of touch with the non-Communist world for about a month. State Department records list 10 persons connected with that consulate. It is headed by Robert L. Smythe of Berkeley, Calif.

Arlington Youth Lost in Hawaii Reported Found

An 18-year-old Arlington youth, lost for 48 hours in mountains near Honolulu, Hawaii, has been found unharmed, his parents reported yesterday.

He is Charles U. Shilling, son of Navy Capt. and Mrs. Charles W. Shilling of 1705 S. Pollard st. Mrs. Shilling said that her son, a freshman at the University of Hawaii, apparently had gone mountain climbing with a friend last Friday.

When they failed to return at the expected time, friends organized a search party. Both were found far off the regular trails, but otherwise unharmed. Young Shilling is a graduate of Western High School.

Indonesian War Continuing

Batavia, Java, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Civil war in Indonesia continues unabated despite the United Nations Security Council cease-fire order, the undercover Republican Radio said tonight.

Major General Suhardjo, inspector general of the Republican army, said over the radio he had just inspected the various fronts of Java and the "outlook for us is good."

Suhardjo reported the Dutch were encountering great difficulties finding Indonesians to administer Dutch-occupied towns.

Republican army communiques reported that Indonesia guerillas were harassing Dutch forces on the outskirts of five Dutch-occupied cities, Jogjakarta, Surkarta, Madium, Kediri and Magelang. A Dutch communique Sunday reported continued Indo-Dutch clashes.

House Bill Proposes Miss. River Parkway

The House yesterday approved a bill appropriating $250,000 to survey a route for a proposed national parkway along the route of the Mississippi River and determine its feasibility. The bill now goes to the Senate.

The National Park Service and Public Roads Administration would make the joint survey.

'Lost' Atom Bomb Hinted at Spy Trial

Munich, Germany, Feb. 21 (AP). Notes purporting to tell of a "lost" American atom bomb and the murder of an English soldier by Russian agents were read today in the spy trial of five Europeans.

The trial opened before a United States military commission with testimony of cloak-and-dagger operations, some of which drew snickers from spectators in the courtroom.

Two of the defendants are Poles and three are Germans. They are accused of espionage for an unidentified foreign power.

The prosecution read into the record notes addressed to the unidentified power which allegedly were found in possession of one of the Poles.

"One American atom bomb has been lost," said one of the cryptic notes.

"America has 600 atom bombs," said another.

A third one reported that an English soldier was stabbed to death and an American soldier was wounded "by two Russian agents." The knifings "should have been ascribed to Germans," it added.

One of the documents described an American airplane "flown by rocket explosions." Another, in code, had to do with the purchase of a pair of trousers.

Maj. F. M. Lundberg, the prosecutor, read 25 documents into the record before the case adjourned to Wednesday. He said they came from a pouch carried by a defendant named Theore Szendielorz. The documents were signed "Robert Eicher," which Lundberg said was the alias of one of the defendants.

All five are accused of selling military information about the strength, disposition and movement of United States troops in Germany.

The trial court, headed by Brig. Gen. John L. McKee, last week sentenced Frontisek Klecka, a waiter on the Orient Express, to 20 years at hard labor in another espionage trial.

Thorp Denies U. S. Facing Depression

Lake Success, N. Y., Feb. 21 (U.P.). Assistant Secretary of State Willard L. Thorp declared today the United States is not heading for depression despite a rise in unemployment and decline in prices.

Speaking before the United Nations Economic and Social Council, Thorp declared it would be "a bad error of judgment" to assume that a major slump is inevitable because of the American drop-off of jobs and prices. On the contrary he said, the United States had almost halved the gap between its exports and imports, thus making a major contribution toward the stability not only of its own economy but of that of the world.

It was the first time that an official of Thorp's importance had taken trouble in the United Nations to decry speculation that an American depression was just around the corner.

"It is apparent to all," Thorp said, "that the United States economy has been functioning quite well—not perfectly, by any means, but quite well. . . .

"In fact, it is an encouraging sign that inflationary pressures in the United States are abating. . . . "

Thorp referred to a 76-page printed report issued by the U. N. Department of Economic Affairs and urged the U. N. secretariat to make "specific and definite" request of any country which had failed to give sufficient information.

Government Houses Put at $17,000 Each

Chicago, Feb. 21 (AP).—Milton J. Brock, president of the National Association of Home Builders, today asserted that Government housing will cost more than $17,000 for each dwelling.

Addressing the association's fifth annual convention, Brock, of Los Angeles, contended proposals pending in Congress would cost $17,800,000,000, exclusive of farm housing.

"This is in excess of $17,000 per unit," he said.

Edward R. Carr, Washington, former NAHB president, told the builders "there must be an oiling and adjustment" of credit machinery.

This must be done, he said to "enable the public to buy on terms they can afford to meet. There is much room for improvement in construction financing."

Trans-Jordan, Israel Talk Peace Friday

Rhodes, Feb. 21 (NYHT).—While awaiting a decision from Cairo on the draft of the Israeli-Egyptian armistice pact, Dr. Ralph Bunche, acting Palestine mediator, announced today that an armistice delegation from Trans-Jordan would arrive at Rhodes Thursday.

United Nations authorities said talks between Trans-Jordan and Israel would begin the following day.

Two Egyptian delegation leaders, Col. Ishmail Sherrine and Col. Mohamed Seif el Din, flew to Cairo this morning. They are expected to return late Tuesday or early Wednesday with a definite answer.

There is a strong feeling here Egypt will approve. Israel already has.

Forrestal Tests Air Force Jet Plane as Pilot

Secretary of Defense Forrestal, a Navy pilot in the first world war, has personally tried out one of the Air Force's new jet planes.

The Air Force said yesterday that Forrestal went up for a half hour Sunday in a two-seater training version of the F-80 "shooting star."

Under the watchful eye of the pilot, Capt. Richard F. Kenney, of Coronado, Calif., Forrestal took the controls briefly.

Kenney took the plane up from National Airport. He climbed to 11,000 feet and made several speed demonstrations of 500 miles an hour. The plane is capable of an announced speed of 600 miles.

Passport Trial Postponed

Ottawa, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—The passport forgery trial of Sam Carr, alleged key man in a Canadian Soviet spy network, was postponed today for one week to give Carr's Toronto attorney, Carl Herman, a week longer to prepare his case.

Reds Demand 3 Kravchenko Witnesses

Paris, Feb. 21 (AP).—Russia tonight asked France to hand over "as war criminals" three witnesses who appeared for Victor A. Kravchenko during his libel suit against a pro-Communist weekly newspaper.

The Soviet news agency Tass said one was Michael Passetchnik, a character witness for the author of "I Chose Freedom." The others were Ivan Krevsoun, 37, Ukrainian, and Nikolai Antonov.

All three testified to brutal treatment and imprisonment by Soviet secret police.

Kravchenko, an anti-Soviet writer, is suing Les Lettres Francaises for $3000 damages because of articles challenging his authorship of the book and the truth of what was described as life in Russia.

The Soviet note said the men were Soviet citizens who served in Hitler's army and "took part in the crimes committed by the Hitlerian invaders."

Senate Approves $16 Million for Palestine Relief

The Senate yesterday passed and sent to the House a resolution authorizing a 16 million dollar United States contribution for the aid of Palestine war refugees.

The money would go into a special United Nations fund and would be used to aid 470,000 Arab and Jewish refugees scattered throughout the Middle East.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), of the Foreign Relations Committee said it was necessary to avert a "great human catastrophe."

Sofia Reports 3d Churchman Admits Spying

News of the impending trial of 15 Protestant leaders in Bulgaria is coming to the Associated Press from its resident correspondent in Sofia, Dimiter Mishev.

Mishev, a Bulgarian lawyer, has reported such events as the trial and execution of Nikola Petkov.

No censorship, as the term generally is understood, is involved but there is what amounts to a "responsibility" censorship. This means that a Bulgarian citizen who serves a foreign news agency or foreign newspaper could be disciplined by the government if the regime found his activities offensive. The Associated Press is seeking visas for American correspondents to enter Bulgaria.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 21 (AP).—The Sofia press reported today another of the 15 Bulgarian Protestant church leaders accused of treason has confessed he was a spy for the United States and Britain.

The confession was attributed to Georgi Chernev, head of the Pentecost Church in Bulgaria. In successive days the papers had reported confessions also from Yanko Ivanov, supervisor of Methodist Churches, and Vassil Ziapkov, Congregational Church leader.

The trial of the churchmen is scheduled to begin Friday.

(Britain denounced the arrest of the churchmen and denied British diplomatic representatives in Sofia are spies. Minister of State Hector McNeil told Parliament the case may constitute a violation of Bulgaria's peace treaty pledges to respect human rights.)

Brother of Benes Is En Route to U. S.

London, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Vojta Benes, 71, brother of the late president Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia, arrived by plane today from Prague on his way to the United States.

"I want to start a new life," he said sadly. "Unfortunately my name is Benes and for me Czechoslovakia is a country of the past."

Benes plans to visit a daughter in Indiana.

Benes said: "I was near my brother when he died. More than that I can not say."

Search Starts For Children Stolen by Nazis

Berlin, Feb. 21 (AP).—American authorities began today a search for 65,000 children who were separated from their families and brought into Nazi Germany during the war.

Plans were worked out by the U. S. Military Government in cooperation with German officials. Names of the missing children were submitted by United Nations members from the files of the International Refugee Organization.

Thousands of children were reunited with their parents in the immediate postwar period.

The search will concentrate on boys and girls under 17 years of age. It will be conducted among children in foster homes and institutions.

The Nazis had an entire organization devoted to kidnaping what they regarded as "racially desirable" children from conquered countries.

Balkan Rift Widens

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 21 (AP).—Yugoslavia accused Albania today of provoking frontier troubles. Relations between the two Balkan neighbors grew colder.

Holiday sales are general throughout the city today

Power Issue Splits Allies And Germans

Bonn, Germany, Feb. 21 (AP).—German demands for broader powers than the Western Allies' occupation statute allows threatened today to delay adoption of the West German constitution.

Allied officials said weeks of dickering will be needed to reconcile viewpoints. They discounted statements of some German politicians that the differences would cause a deadlock.

The main dispute concerns how much economic power the new western German federal republic should have. The German desire for broad power, especially in the field of foreign trade, runs into the Allied pledge to so regulate Germany's economy that she never again can become an aggressive military power.

Ratification of the constitution is being deferred until publication of the now-secret terms of the Western Allies' occupation statute. The occupation statute will define what powers the Allies will allow.

Voice to Reach New Areas in East Europe

Berlin, Feb. 21 (NYHT).—A million-dollar radio transmitter is being constructed near Munich to beam the Voice of America to areas in the Balkans and the Soviet Union hitherto unpenetrated.

The new weapon in the East-West cold war will be ready in three or four more weeks.

The station will for the first time permit eastern Europe and southern Russia to hear the Voice of America on a medium wave-length. Until now broadcasts have been transmitted by short-wave only. This has been a great disadvantage, for in Europe as well as in America the average radio listener tunes in to the regular bands—medium or long wave-length.

Berlin Jews Win Ban on 'Oliver Twist'

Berlin, Feb. 21 (AP).—Polish Jews battled German police in the heart of Berlin today until they obtained a promise that "Oliver Twist," a British-made film, will not be shown in the city.

Singing a Hebrew hymn they dispersed after more than an hour of fighting. They had contended the film character of Fagin, teaching small boys to steal, was anti-Semitic.

"If they try to show it again, we'll blow up the cinema," one group shouted.

Henry Durbin, representative of the Eagle-Lion Studios which produced this film version of the Charles Dickens' novel, said the movie would not be shown in Berlin. Rioting last night prevented its first showing at the same British sector theater, the Kurbel.

The fight today surged around the Kurfuerstendamm area, which has a large Jewish population. About 25 Jews were injured, their leaders said. Four were taken to a hospital. They said they were hit with rubber clubs, gun butts and fists.

Several German police and British public safety officials were hit with stones. There were minor casualties among German civilians, some of whom got into the fight.

Pact to Vow U. S. Will Resist Aggressor, 'Hill' Leader Says

By The Associated Press

A highly-placed source said yesterday the United States would give assurances in the proposed North Atlantic pact that she would not stand idly by if any of the signers is attacked.

The exact language of the promise remains to be worked out.

In England and elsewhere, considerable dismay had been expressed after Senate foreign policy leaders made it clear about a week ago they would not go along with an "automatic war" clause.

Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), believe such a clause would bypass Congress' right to declare war.

But an official said yesterday Secretary of State Acheson has reached an understanding with the Foreign Relations Committee on the nature of the assurances.

Acheson is scheduled to meet within the next day or two with representatives of Canada and the European countries taking part in the talks.

The State Department hopes to present the pact to Congress in a month, and to back it up with a multi-billion-dollar military aid program for western Europe.

With the final treaty talks approaching, the State Department went ahead with plans for the arms program expected to supply more than three billion dollars worth of armaments to Europe. The amount would include surplus Army stocks now on hand.

The program is expected to call for appropriation of more than one billion dollars in the first year.

Unlike the alliance, such a program must have the approval of the House and the Senate. The North Atlantic pact will be presented as a treaty, requiring two thirds approval of the Senate.

Some Controls Lifted

Ottawa, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Canada today removed export and import controls on all animal, vegetable and marine oils and fats.

Forrestal Asks Revamping of Military Pay

Defense Secretary James Forrestal asked Congress yesterday to revamp military pay scales to bring them into line with private industry.

Testifying before a House Armed Services subcommittee, he pointed out that President Truman's budget calls for 400 million dollars additional next year to take care of increases.

Legislation before the subcommittee stems from a lengthy study of the military pay situation prepared by a board of civilians, he declared. It provides for an average boost of 14 per cent, with the biggest hike going to brigadier generals and rear admirals.

Charles R. Hook, chairman of the board of Armco Steel, and head of the pay commission, told the subcommittee they proposed adjustment of the pay scales to base compensation on comparable responsibility in private industry.

Another member of the commission, L. H. Whiting, head of the American Furniture Mart in Chicago, testified that a series of piecemeal pay revisions over the past 40 years has given undue reward for length of service and failed to compensate "top management" as it should.

Pay increases under the bill would range from 3.03 per cent for Army privates and comparable ranks to 49.58 per cent for brigadier generals and lower half rear admirals. Army and Navy recruits would receive no increase but they receive a boost in rank after six months.

The civilian commission pointed out that the pay of high ranking officers has been raised only slightly since 1908, while the lowest enlisted pay ranks have had their pay quadrupled and sergeants' pay has doubled. The enlisted grades benefitted particularly just before and after the war when increases were voted to step up volunteers rather than employ conscription.

Members of the commission, which reported last December, were Hook, Father Cavanaugh, president of Notre Dame University; K. S. McHugh, vice president of the American Telephone Co., and Whiting.

The bill is not yet approved by the Budget Bureau, and Forrestal said for that reason he could not indorse this specific legislation although it was prepared in his office. He estimated its first year 400 million dollars cost would ease off to about 280 million dollars after five years.

The Army, Air Force, Navy, Marines, Coast Guard, Public Health Service and Coast and Geodetic Survey personnel would benefit as "uniformed services."

2 Arlington Police Get 5 Years In Theft; May Go Free Soon

Two suspended Arlington policemen yesterday received five-year sentences for breaking into a supermarket while on duty November 16.

But Arlington Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy said he will consider suspending both sentences at a special hearing scheduled for March 21.

Until the hearing, the men, Louie L. Liptrap, 24, and Charles H. James, 28, were committed to Arlington Jail by Judge McCarthy. They had been free in $1000 bond each.

Suspended Sentence Usual

In pronouncing sentence yesterday, Judge McCarthy said that "the mere fact that these two young men are policemen ought not to make any difference" in their punishment.

He said that when men convicted of felonies have no previous records and plead guilty, it is "customary" to suspend their sentences.

But "I think they should be given some punishment" in addition to the probation, the Judge added. By the time Liptrap and James come up for possible probation March 21, both men will have served a month in Arlington jail.

Probation Recommended

Judge McCarthy said that probation for both of the suspended policemen had been recommended by Chief Probation Officer Charles T. Booth. McCarthy said Booth did not come "easily" to the conclusion.

Both Liptrap and James originally pleaded innocent to breaking into the Acme Supermarket at 4717 Lee hwy., Arlington. They changed the plea to guilty January 27.

According to Police Chief Harry Woodyard, the two men were discovered in the rear of the supermarket about 4 a. m. by the sergeant in charge of the night detail.

The rear door had been forced, Woodyard said, and some groceries placed in the trunk of their scout car.

mation that Beckmann had lived for a while in the 3600 block of Rhode Island ave. ne., before going to Germany, the prosecutor asked:

"While you lived there you had Adolf Hitler's picture on the wall, didn't you?"

The question was ruled out when Laughlin objected.

According to Laughlin, Federal Communications Commission employes will appear Wednesday with other recordings intercepted by United States monitors. These will be used, Laughlin said, in an attempt to show that others may have broadcast some "Axis Sally" programs.

Three additional witnesses, being flown here from Germany, will take the stand, he said. If they are not here by Wednesday, Miss Gillars will testify following the FCC people. Laughlin said he expects his case to continue until March 10 with Miss Gillars on the stand for 10 days.

There will be no court proceedings today—Washington's Birthday.

State Dept. Reform Asked to 1933. Stimson served as an adviser to the Hoover Commission's "task force," headed by two former Assistant Secretaries of of State, Harvey H. Bundy and James Grafton Rogers, which spent almost a year in surveying the problem and working out solutions.

Stimson said the American people had undertaken "a position of leadership in the cause of peace and freedom throughout the world.'

Role Must Continue

"This great undertaking will continue as long as we can foresee," he wrote in a letter dated November 22, 1948. "The crises and dangers of today may pass, but the progress of the world will never be automatic. We must recognize, therefore, that as a participating member of the world community, in time of peace as in time of peril, the United States must continue to play a major part.

"In meeting the emergencies of recent years, we have frequently been forced to take special measures to reinforce the inadequate structure of our governmental machinery in foreign affairs. We have not had time—or we have thought we did not have time—to do a thorough job of reorganization to meet our new and broader duties.

"Now we know that this haste has brought grave problems. We know that we must settle down for a long pull."

Stimson went on to argue "the absolutely critical importance of leaving nothing undone that may make us better able to ward off the danger of catastrophe, and to bring nearer, in so far as in us lies, the lasting peace which all mankind demands."

People Deserve Best

"Our people deserve the best in organization and skill from their Government," he declared. "Our President and Secretary of State deserve every possible advantage of sound organization and qualified personnel. These are the instruments of our struggle for an end to fear and a beginning of new hope and confidence, among ourselves and all the people of the world."

Only one of the proposed internal State Department changes is highly controversial and will be hotly resisted, from inside and outside the department. This is the plan for a gradual amalgamation "over a short period of years," of the professional Foreign Service of career officers and the so-called departmental service of State Department employes in Washington.

The two would be merged into a single "foreign affairs service," obligated to serve at home or abroad, and, in the words of the report, "constituting a safeguarded career group administered separately from the general Civil Service."

Such a merger would require drastic amendment of the Foreign Service Act of Congress of 1946. It would also have to overcome strenuous and emotional objections from Foreign Service officers, active and retired.

For these reasons among others Acheson intends to go slowly in merging the two services. There will be further studies within the department throughout this year, and amendment of the existing act of Congress probably will not be sought until next year at the earliest.

Reservation by Forrestal

Defense Secretary Forrestal, a member of the Hoover Commission, appended a "reservation" to the report, saying that while he agreed generally with the proposed merger because of its "administrative advantages," he felt it "of crucial importance that this process not be permitted to operate so as to destroy the morale or spirit of either group."

The commission said that intelligence is the State Department's "weakest and least effective unit."

It said there is a "basic misconception on all sides, including the intelligence unit itself, of the intelligence needs of the department." There is an apparent "overemphasis on pure research, the bulk of which is not used within the department."

Moreover, the commission said, relations between the intelligence unit and the central intelligence agency for all Government agencies "partake of rivalry rather than cooperation."

Other major proposals for changes within the State Department, most of them forecast by advance reports, are as follows:

(1) Creation of two deputy undersecretaries, one for policy and one for administration. The first of these posts is expected to go to Dean Rusk, recently made assistant secretary; the second to Assistant Secretary John E. Peurifoy, now in charge of the department's administrative work.

2. Ending of the present division between the so-called geographic or regional offices, and the economic and other "functional" units. In place of one assistant secretary for political affairs there would be four, each of them responsible for all State Department action within the four areas into which American diplomacy divides the world: Europe, Latin America, the Far East, and the Near East and Africa.

3. Appointment of an Assistant Secretary for Congressional Affairs, a post to which Ernest A. Gross was appointed last week, and an Assistant Secretary for International Organization Affairs. The Assistant Secretary for Economic and Social Affairs (now Willard Thorp) would become largely a coordinating officer between the State Department and other government agencies.

The Assistant Secretary for Public Affairs (now George V. Allen) would become directly responsible for press and public relations at home and abroad. He would delegate operating responsibility for the "Voice of America" and other foreign information work to a new "general manager."

Altogether there would be eight assistant secretaries. Six are authorized by law at present and two of these positions expire at the end of this year. New legislation, therefore, would be needed for four new assistant secretaries.

Bolivian Cabinet Resigns In Wake of Thwarted Plot

La Paz, Bolivia, Feb. 21 (U.P.)—The cabinet of President Enrique Hertzog resigned today as the country remained in a state of siege following discovery of a plot to overthrow the government.

Hertzog announced he would immediately organize a "cabinet of national unity" to combat subversive activities reported led by dissident former government officials.

All political meetings were banned throughout Bolivia and a curfew was imposed effective at 10 o'clock each night.

It was understood the Bolivian government had notified the Argentine Ambassador of subversive activities of Bolivians now living in Argentina and asked the Argentines to halt them.

A similar note was sent to Peru.

Regional commanders in Bolivia, meanwhile, notified Hertzog that they would defend public order against any threats by the revolutionary movement.

Exiled Bolivians Call 'Plot' a Fantasy

Arica, Chile, Feb. 21 (U.P.)—Ten prominent Bolivians, exiled following discovery of a revolutionary plot this weekend, charged today that Bolivian President Enrique Hertzog had invented the plot to get rid of political opponents.

The 10 Bolivians, 6 of whom are candidates to the Deputies Chamber and the Senate in the May elections, called the reported plot a "fantasy" and said Hertzog had sent them to Chile to insure a government victory in the elections.

Gustavo Chacon, former editor of the newspaper La Noche and former foreign affairs minister, was spokesman for the group.

Nicaragua, Costa Rica Agree

Costa Rica and Nicaragua ended their 10-week-old dispute yesterday by signing a friendship pact at formal ceremonies in the Pan American Union.

Delegates of the two Central American countries said the document is effective proof of inter-American cooperation and a real step toward peace.

This was the first test of the Rio mutual defense treaty of 1947. Costa Rica invoked it on December 12, only nine days after putting it into force by depositing the last ratification needed.

Costa Rica complained that an invasion of her territory, headed by an exiled former President of the country, was started in Nicaragua.

Nicaragua denied the charges and after lengthy negotiations, the two countries agreed to:

1. Prevent a repetition of such occurrences in the future and set up machinery that can be put to work immediately if a similar situation arises again.
2. Seek peaceful solutions of any disputes.

Ex-Virginia Labor Head Is Senate Doorkeeper

John Hopkins Hall of Richmond, former Virginia labor commissioner, has been appointed a Senate doorkeeper, the office of Senator Robertson (D., Va.) said today.

Hall was appointed by the Senate patronage committee at the recommendation of Robertson, an aide to the Senator said.

Cox Scuttles Plan To Stop Pension Bill

Conditions Cited

Plea Voiced To Support Police Bills

The House Rules Committee will "probably" report the Rankin multibillion-dollar veterans pension bill to the House floor within the next 21 days.

This was conceded last night by Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.), chairman of committee, after these developments:

Representative E. E. Cox (D., Ga.), ranking member of the Rules group, told the House he will not be a party to what he called a "scheme" to keep the explosive bill from reaching the House floor.

To block Rankin, some leaders thought up the idea of getting the Rules Committee to aprove the bill but with the understanding that no Rules member would ever bring it up in the House. That would leave the bill suspended in mid-air, so to speak, since only a Rules member could call it up for debate.

Cox knocked that idea in the head by saying he would call up the bill if it should be reported out.

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), another member of the Rules group, told newsmen he is opposed to the pension bill but would vote to report it to the House floor, even though he votes against it in the House.

Smith argued that since the recent House rules reform, the House Rules group has no choice but to report any bill on which a rule is asked.

There was a strong possibility, however, that the Rules Committee report on the bill will be unfavorable.

Under House procedure, only the Rules chairman or (after seven days) some other member of his committee can be recognized by the Speaker to call up a rule.

If one of them so moves, Speaker Rayburn is required by the Rules to recognize him.

The Speaker meanwhile absorbed all the heat for the Administration on the White House opposed pension measure that Mr. Truman has suggested puts too heavy a financial load on the Government.

Representative John Rankin (D., Miss.), striking back at the Democratic leadership, which helped oust him from the House Un-American Activities Committee, put it directly up to the Speaker yesterday.

He asked Rayburn to recognize him to "suspend the rules" and force the bill immediately before the House for a vote. Rayburn declined to recognize him for that purpose.

In these other moves, Rankin:

1. Asked the Rules Committee to report his bill.

2. Jockeyed the measure onto the "consent calendar" where it will automatically come up for consideration but can be blocked by a single objection.

3. Announced he would object to the usual leadership move to "dispense" with "Calendar Wednesday." On Calendar Wednesdays the Speaker calls the roll of committee chairmen with bills to report.

If the bill ultimately reaches the House floor and is passed, as most House observers think likely, the Administration's last stand, short of a veto, will come in the Senate, where the Finance Committee is reported almost solidly opposed to the measure.

Bloomingdale

Basic findings in the recent Report on Segregation in the Nation's Capital were "heartily indorsed" last night by the Bloomingdale Civic Association, meeting in Tabor Presbyterian Church, 2d and S sts. nw.

The membership campaign of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People also was indorsed and five workers named to solicit members.

Marshall Heights

The Marshall Heights Civic Association last night named a committee to meet with District Commissioners Wednesday to ask continuance of Marshall Heights redevelopment hearings.

More than five members attended the association's meeting at the First Baptist Church, 50th and B sts. se. The redevelopment hearings have been scheduled for Friday.

Chillum Heights

The Chillum Heights Citizens Association approved a District sales tax last night during a meeting at Luther Rice Memorial Baptist Church, 5315 N. Capitol st.

The association voted to oppose granting of a Class C liquor license to the Kennedy Food Shop at 322 Kennedy st. nw. It approved, however, proposed construction of a new wing at Keene Elementary School, Rock Creek Church and Riggs rds. ne.

Ten persons attended the meeting.

Interfederation Council

Crime knows no boundaries and Greater Washington police forces maintain a "very close tieup," Inspector Clarence H. Lutz of the Metropolitan Police, told the Interfederation Council last night.

"The problem of one of the jurisdictions is the problem of all," the inspector declared, explaining the cooperation now in force among the various area police organizations.

Lincoln Park

Action of the Federation of Citizens Associations in urging afterhours clubs be brought under the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board was approved last night by the Lincoln Park Citizens Association.

The group met at Epworth Methodist Church, 13th st. and North Carolina ave. ne.

Capitol View

Calling it a method for creating a ghetto in the area, the Capitol View Citizens Association last night went on record against the proposed Marshall Heights redevelopment plan.

The 56 persons attending the meeting at the Richardson School, 53rd and Blaine sts. ne., indorsed a resolution opposing the plan.

Shepherd Park

The Shepherd Park Citizens Association last night went on record as opposing the running of any bus lines on Kalmia rd. nw. The association met at Shepherd School, 14th and Kalmia sts. nw.

The action was taken following a report that the Capital Transit Co. had sought Public Utilities Commission approval for a new line to operate from East-West hwy. through Rock Creek Park on West Beech dr., to Kalmia rd. and then to the Georgia and Alaska aves. terminal. A public hearing was asked before any ruling should be handed down by the PUC.

Cain Charges Wallgren Is 'Soft' to Reds

By The Associated Press

Senator Cain (R., Wash.) renewed his attack on the nomination of Mon C. Wallgren to a high defense post yesterday, accusing the former Washington State Governor of being "soft" toward Communists.

Wallgren scoffed at the charges.

The Senate Armed Services Committee asked Wallgren to return for further examination in connection with his nomination by President Truman as chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

Stepping up his bitter one-man fight which he began last week, Cain told the Senate group that Wallgren is incompetent to hold the $14,000-a-year job.

Cain said he was not charging Wallgren personally with being "either a Communist or disloyal," but he declared:

"During the term of office of Mon Wallgren, the entire (Washington) State administration came under the control of persons whose first allegiance is to the Kremlin."

Wallgren, a close personal friend of President Truman, served as Governor of Washington from 1944 to 1948 when he was defeated for reelection.

The former Governor, told a reporter by telephone later he would answer Cain's charges fully Thursday.

"The people of my State," he chuckled, "know that I am not a Communist sympathizer. The people Senator Cain was talking about are the ones who fought me bitterly in the last election in which I was defeated."

Cain, in his fresh attack, also said that Wallgren did not tell the committee last week that he had three men here working for the National Security Resources Board as $50-a-day consultants.

Cain named the men as Jack Gorrie, Wallgren's former assistant governor; Jack Ballou and John Davis, former Washington State officials.

Bill to Extend Export Control Sent Truman

The Senate approved and sent to the White House yesterday a bill to extend to June 30, 1951, the Government's power to control exports.

The measure was passed finally by unanimous consent. The House passed the bill February 17.

Surplus farm commodities, including fats and oils, are exempted from controls under the bill except where controls are necessary to meet national security and foreign policy requirements.

The measure was one of those asked by President Truman in the eight-point stabilization program he laid down in his state of the Union message.

It gives the Government wider authority to subpena the books of any person to obtain information for enforcing controls. The Government also can make public the information if a department head finds that withholding it would be "contrary to the national interest."

3 Services Urge Rent Control Continuation as Defense Aid

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Army, Navy and Air Force yesterday asked Congress to continue rent control as a defense measure.

The military establishment told the House Banking and Currency Committee that the biggest factor in the present low reenlistment rate "is inadequate living accommodations, or inadequate accommodations at excessive rentals."

Eugene M. Zuckert, Assistant Secretary of the Air Force, who presented the military's statement, warned:

"Mobilization, or a change in production requirements, might very well hamper industrial activity unless rental housing is available on a reasonable basis."

Previously Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods had told the committee that expanding defense activity requires the extension of rent ceilings to additional areas.

The armed services disclosed that the problem of housing servicemen had grown so acute that they were planning to propose special legislation to meet it. Such legislation would "enable us to interest private enterprise to invest in, and develop housing projects on or near our installations."

The military establishment cited examples of specific problems.

"At Mather Field, Calif., for example, "Zuckert told the committee," the commanding general has allowed enlisted men and their families to recondition old barracks-type buildings, where it is necessary for entire families to use common cooking, and other facilities. The reason? Principally because the military income will not stand a $60 to $80 a month room in a town 12 miles from the base."

Woods gave a lukewarm indorsement yesterday to a proposal put forth by some property owners that Congress write into the next rent control law a provision for "a fair return on fair value." "This would be difficult to work out in practice," Woods warned.

Meanwhile, before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, Senators John Bricker (R., Ohio) and Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) urged support for their bill to provide low-rent housing societies under State charter.

Both Senators claimed the Administration's public housing program would "suppress" local government and "override" State authority.

Subcommittee Chairman John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) said the Cain-Bricker bill would not accomplish the public housing program needed. The subcommittee is scheduled to start writing up its measure Wednesday with a view to presenting it to the Senate early next week.

Taft Upholds Basic Provisions of T-H

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Senator Robert A. Taft yesterday declared he was prepared to modify his views on some 58 points in the Taft-Hartley Labor Relations Act.

The co-author of the labor law added, however, that none of the modifications affect "the principles of the act."

"The basic provisions," Taft said, "are those protecting union members against the arbitrary power of labor bosses and those providing a summary remedy against secondary boycott."

Response to Murray

The Ohio Republican also told reporters in Cleveland yesterday that other provisions in the Taft-Hartley Act dealing with "racketeering practices" in labor unions will also be retained."

Taft's prediction of things to come—out of the Senate floor fight anticipated on the Administration's move to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act—came in response to a week-end statement by Philip Murray, CIO president.

Murray detailed 18 points in the Taft-Hartley Act on which he said Taft had backed down. In Cleveland, Taft conceded as much and added there are about 40 other modifications he favors.

Morse Praises Taft

Earlier yesterday, Senato Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), who opposes both the Taft-Hartley Act and the Administration's proposal to substitute an 'improved" Wagner Act for it, observed that he and Taft were drawing closer together in their views on labor legislation.

Morse, who announced he will present a labor bill of his own, issued a statement praising the "fair-minded objectivity" of Taft in considering evidence on the shortcomings of the Taft-Hartley Act.

"He and I may not agree on all details as to the need of drastic revision of the Taft-Hartley law," Morse said, "but I am satisfied that we are much nearer together on the point of the need of a law less drastic against labor than we were in 1947 . . ."

Morse's statement here, followed by that of Taft in Cleveland, added another straw to the wind of rumors that the regular Republicans like Taft and the so-called "young Turks" like Morse would get together on a single legislative measure. Such a bill, backed by a coalition of conservative Southern Democrats, might well succeed the Taft-Hartley Act instead of the Administration's repealer.

NAM Assailed

The statement of Morse also tore into those who favor complete retention of the Taft-Hartley Act, specifically naming the National Association of Manufacturers and the United States Chamber of Commerce.

"It is clear that many employers still look upon labor as a commodity to be hired as cheaply as possible," Morse declared.

"This attitude of the selfish proponents of the Taft-Hartley law constitutes a Judas betrayal of the capitalistic system.

"I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of American employers do not share the class conscious, selfish attitude toward labor which has been demonstrated by many of the witnesses appearing before our committee. I hold to the view that the capitalistic system is the best economic medium which we could possibly have for putting into practice the Christian principles of brotherhood."

Other Views Presented

The Senate Labor Committee, which plans to end its hearings on Wednesday, yesterday heard:

J. T. Sanders, legislative representative of the National Grange, a farmers group, assert that the Taft-Hartley Act has had "a corrective effect" on labor-management relations.

B. A. Whitney, research director of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, urges repeal on the ground the Taft-Hartley Act has substituted court injunctions for collective bargaining.

NLRB Finds T-H Error

to stop doing business with the prefab manufacturer, who did not employ union carpenters, by picketing the builder's project. The peaceful picketing, together with "We Do Not Patronize" placards, had the effect of inducing the employes of companies which supplied the builder to withhold deliveries of material.

Involved in this case are two contradictory provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act. The law contains a free speech clause which states that uncoercive expression of "any views, arguments or opinion," or their dissemination, is not an unfair labor practice "under any of the provisions of the act."

The law also contains a secondary boycott clause which forbids a union to "induce or encourage" employes to withhold their labor from one employer to bring pressure upon another employer.

The principal majority opinion, signed by Board Members James J. Reynolds, jr., and J. Copeland Gray, and the "reluctant" concurring opinion by Chairman Herzog, agreed that the Eightieth Congress was more interested in eliminating secondary boycotts than in protecting peaceful picketing and union "do not patronize" lists.

The dissenting opinion of Board Members J. M. Houston and Abe Murdock held that the free speech clause of the Taft-Hartley Act gives immunity to peaceful picketing and the union blacklist.

The ruling against General Motors ordered the Nation's No. 1 auto maker to bargain with the United Auto Workers on proposed changes in its group insurance plan. The dispute involves 225,000 employes, and goes back to 1947, when the company announced it was going to put into effect a new insurance plan.

The announced action was immediately denounced by UAW President Walter Reuther, who charged the company with refusal to bargain on the subject. Robert N. Denham, NLRB counsel, obtained a court injunction against the company pending NLRB action. The injunction was withdrawn last spring through company-union agreement.

National Guard Draft Urged

eligibles not now being taken by the Regular Army.

No one last night could give an accurate answer of the number of men needed to fill such units. The Army National Guard now is between 75,000 and 100,000 men short of the newly recommended goals, one official said. No one was ready to estimate the present enlisted strength of the Reserve.

In making public the report, Army Secretary Kenneth Royall said he had referred it to the Army General Staff for study and recommendation.

The Byrnes committee declared that its proposals should not be interpreted as a substitute for UMT.

Even though cost of the presently proposed plan is large, said the group, "we firmly believe that we cannot afford a cheaper program."

The unanimous report recommended maintaining 13 National Guard divisions at 75 per cent enlisted strength and 14 divisions at 40 per cent enlisted strength. Officer complements would be at full strength. Twenty-five "Class B" reserve divisions would be established, with officers at 200 per cent strength and men at 10 per cent strength.

Bill Outlawing Extra Overtime Passes House

The House yesterday overwhelmingly approved a bill to outlaw future claims by longshoremen and building workers for so-called "overtime on overtime" pay.

The measure, sent to the Senate, was passed by a 230-7 standing vote after Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) of the Labor Committee said it was needed to "stave off trouble" in the stevedoring industry.

Noting that contracts expire within the next few weeks, he said it will be difficult for labor and management to reach agreement unless Congress settles the question of overtime pay.

Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP., N. Y.), led the small-scale opposition. He protested that longshoremen and building workers were "taking a licking."

"It is significant," he said, "that the very first piece of labor legislation to come to this Congress—a Congress that is supposed to be the friend of labor—takes thousands and thousands of workers from under the protection of the Fair Labor Standards Act."

The bill would have no effect on back pay claims filed by individual workers in the past, but would prevent similar suits in the future.

Most of the suits have been filed by longshoremen who traditionally work under two pay schedules, a day rate and a night rate. The night rate, which also is in effect on Sundays and holidays, is one and one-half times the day rate.

Stevedoring firms have considered the night rate to be "overtime pay." Consequently, if a longshoreman worked over 40 hours a week or more than 8 hours a day, the companies have paid him the straight night rate.

Landis, Ex-CAB Head, Joins Law Firm Here

HERE'S OUR FOUR-SQUARE SELLING POLICY!

1. NO PRICE PADDING! We guarantee our prices to contain nothing but charges that were standard practice in figuring prewar delivered prices. You receive an itemized bill of sale showing all charges. And we display our prices in our showroom.

2. NO "LOADING" OF UNWANTED ACCESSORIES. All cars are delivered with accessories as ordered. We pledge ourselves to add no "extras" you do not want.

3. NO COMPULSORY TRADE-INS. Selling used cars is part of our business. Naturally we like to take cars in trade. But you do not have to sell your car to us! We will take your order, and deliver your car, without requiring a car in trade!

4. NO COLLUSION WITH "GRAY MARKETEERS." We will not knowingly be party to a sale of Buick cars to any individual who operates in the "gray market." Our interest is entirely in delivering cars to bona fide customers.

Chest Units to Get 5% Added Funds

assuming the Chest Federation could have covered all its patients' costs. The District pays the hospitals $9 a day for indigent cases.

Keyes explained that the federation had estimated last July that 87,000 adult in-patient days would have to be covered in the hospitalization fund budget for 1949. At the end of last year, actual 1948 experience of 69,480 adult patient days was reported, and this figure was adopted as the revised 1949 estimate.

When the Commissioners ordered the liberalized definition of indigency to be applied to hospital cases, a further revision of estimates was made by allowing for those who would be shifted to District support, scaling the total estimated adult patient days further to 49,940.

Keyes pointed out that the hospitalization fund allocated amounts to only $68,000 less than the $550,000 figure originally used as a goal for that fund. Such a goal was predicated on 100 per cent success in the $4,200,000 1949 federation campaign goal, whereas total contributions actually came to some $800,000 less than that.

Total Gifts $3,536,625

Contributions of $3,435,554 and $101,070 in cash available from 1948 totaled $3,536,625, which was allocated yesterday as follows:

Headquarters expenses (including 1949 campaign), $326,430; USO, $40,511; Community Chest and Council expenses, $11,284; contingency fund, $37,615; retirement reserve, $75,000; shrinkage reserve, $239,800.

Of the $2,805,984 remaining for Chests and hospitalization, $482,460 was allocated to the hospitalization fund; for the Alexandria Chest, $110,961; Arlington, $95,292; Fairfax, $49,309; Montgomery County, $133,027; Prince Georges County, $92,654, and Washington, $1,866,785.

In order to cover these member Chest allocations, $24,506 was taken from the contingency reserve.

Disloyalty Evidence Bill Set Up in House

Legislation was introduced in the House yesterday to require evidence in support of public charges of disloyalty made against United States officials or employes.

Representative Cavalcante (D., Pa.) authorized a bill to levy a $1000 fine or six months imprisonment against any person who failed to file written evidence with the Attorney General after making charges in public meetings, over the radio or in the press.

For 'Not Working'

Red Berated By Governor Of Indiana

Indianapolis, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—The Governor of Indiana tangled with a Communist today.

Ben Cohen, State Communist chairman, handed Gov. Henry F. Schricker a leaflet at the door of the State Employment Security Office. The leaflet advocated $40-a-week unemployment compensation, twice the maximum benefit under Indiana law.

Schricker took it absently and walked into the office. A moment later he came charging out, red-faced and angry.

"So you're a Communist?" he said to Cohen.

"Yes, sir," Cohen replied.

"Then why don't you go back to Russia and peddle your papers? Take this propaganda back where it started and pass it out to your friends."

Cohen said he wasn't a Russian, but an American.

"I don't think much of your idea of Americanism," Schricker said. "Did you ever try working for a living?"

"This is my work," Cohen said. "Well, you can take it from me it isn't very productive work."

Schricker told reporters:

"It got under my hide to see all those people out there in line, people who would work if they could, and then have this guy passing out stuff like this which would ruin the economy of the State."

Cohen said he told the Governor the Communists plan to tax the big corporations who made millions during the war to help people who were now out of work, but doubted the Governor heard him because he was walking away.

Argentine War Aide Flays Army Rumors

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—War Minister Gen. Humberto Sosamolina described as "infamous" today reports that the army was "interfering in affairs of state."

He referred to rumors the army was making demands on the government for political and economic changes.

$460,000 Fund Established by Hecht Founder

A $460,000 charitable fund to aid religious, scientific, literary and educational institutions is established under the terms of the will of Alexander Hecht, one of the founders of Hecht Co. department stores.

Filed in Orphans' Court, Baltimore the will directs trustees of the estate to establish the fund, to be known as the Alexander Hecht and Selma H. Hecht Foundation, with 20,000 shares of Hecht Co. common stock. A share is now worth $23, according to a company representative.

Distribution of the fund will be made under broad powers of the trustees and will not be limited to organizations in the Baltimore area, a family spokesman said.

Trustees for the fund are Mr. Hecht's daughter, Mrs. Rhyda H Levi, her husband, Robert, and the Safe Deposit & Trust Co., both of Baltimore.

The will also contained bequests to relatives, friends and personal employes of the man who helped build his parent's modest store in Baltimore into 11 large department stores in Baltimore, New York, Washington, and Silver Spring.

The charitable foundation will make gifts to corporations, trusts, community chests, and similar organizations operated exclusively for charitable purposes, according to the will.

The residue of the estate was left to his widow, Mrs. Selma Hecht and three grandchildren in trust.

Named as executors of the estate were Mrs. Hecht, Robert Levi, Sylvan Hayes Lauchheimer, and the Safe Deposit and Trust Co.

Mr. Hecht died at his home in Baltimore on February 4. He was 82.

First President To Be Honored

parently with intentions of making it a four-day holiday, transportation officials reported yesterday's traffic was no higher than usual. There were few inquiries for travel information from motorists, the American Automobile Association said.

Virginia's Gov. William M. Tuck and Alexandria's Mayor William T. Wilkins will lead the parade in the nearby city, which starts at 2:30 p. m. on Washington st. at Jefferson st. It is expected to continue for two hours.

The nine divisions of the parade will be headed by Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, commander of the Military District of Washington, as grand marshal.

They will include Army, Navy, Marine and Air Force units, local police and firemen, high school cadets, veterans and civic organizations, fraternal organizations, floats, and a score of bands.

Air cover will be provided by two squadrons of Navy carrier planes from Norfolk and two squadrons of Air Force craft.

The traditional sponsors of the parade, the Russell Mitchell Post No. 609, will be joined this year by the Alexandria Bicentennial Commission as cosponsors.

Historic Gadsby's Tavern, where Washington and other leaders of his day frequently discussed affairs of state, will be the scene of radio broadcasts throughout the day, and a reception for Governor Tuck.

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, military aide to President Truman, will place the President's wreath at the Mount Vernon ceremonies, which will begin at 11 a. m. Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) and seven Representatives will participate as members of VFW departments in their respective States.

VFW Commander in Chief Lyall T. Beggs of Madison, Wis., and department representatives from various parts of the country, will participate in the program which follows.

Led by George Washington Post No. 1, American Legion posts from the District and nearby area will also lay wreaths at Washington's tomb, beginning at 12:30 p. m.

Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) will be the principal speaker at the joint program sponsored at 10:30 p. m. in the Department Auditorium by the District chapters of Sons of the Revolution, Daughters of the American Revolution and Sons of the American Revolution.

The program will include the laying of wreaths at the Washington Monument by representatives of the four organizations. Music will be provided by the United States Marine Band Orchestra and the National Press Club Chorus.

In Annapolis, Governor Lane and the Maryland Legislature will be hosts to a group of officers of the Organization of American States at a ceremony honoring the liberators of the American Republics as well as Washington.

At Fredericksburg, Va., a reenactment of young George Washington's legendary feat of throwing a silver dollar across the Rappahannock River will be the highlight of the day. Nine high school boys from the area will make the attempt.

Other Area Events

Other Washington area holiday events are scheduled as follows:

is the most Beautiful BUY of all

STYLELINE DE LUXE 2-DOOR SEDAN

The most Beautiful* BUY *for Styling.

Look at this exciting new Chevrolet from any point of view—inside and outside, front, side and rear—and you'll agree it's the smartest-looking automobile of this new year. For it alone, of all low-priced cars, brings you the distinguished beauty and luxury of Body by Fisher—the body featured on highest-priced cars.

The most Beautiful* BUY *for Comfort.

Settle into the deep, soft, form-fitting seats. Notice the extra-generous head, leg and elbowroom of the Super-Size Interior. Ride in this "car that breathes"—with an advanced heating* and ventilating system that inhales outside air and exhales stale air—giving comfort beyond compare! *(Heater and defroster units optional at extra cost.)

The most Beautiful* BUY for Driving and Riding Ease—with new Center-Point Design.

Most sensational of all the advancements in this thrilling new Chevrolet for 1949 is the entirely new kind of driving and riding ease which it introduces into the low-priced field. New Center-Point Design—including Center-Point Steering, Center-Point Seating, lower Center of Gravity and Center-Point Rear Suspension—brings you driving and riding results heretofore found only in more expensive cars. The difference is so great—and so pleasing—that it's no exaggeration to say it is proving a revelation to all who drive or ride in this car. Remember—only new Center-Point Design can give these finer motoring results; and only the new Chevrolet offers Center-Point Design at lowest cost.

The most Beautiful* BUY *for Performance with Economy.

What thrills you'll have when you drive this car! It's the only low-priced car with a Valve-in-Head engine—the engine which more and more makers of higher-priced cars are adopting—because it gives a much finer combination of performance, economy and dependability. And Chevrolet's world's champion Valve-in-Head engine holds all records for miles served and owners satisfied.

The most Beautiful* BUY *for All-Round Safety.

Yes, you and your family will enjoy maximum safety, for Chevrolet brings you fivefold safety protection found only in this one low-priced car: (1) New Certi-Safe Hydraulic Brakes; (2) Extra-Strong Fisher Unisteel Body-Construction; (3) New Panoramic Visibility; (4) Safety Plate Glass in windshield and all windows, and (5) the super-steady, super-safe Unitized Knee-Action Ride.

Many FTC Rules Called 'Ridiculous'

Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.) charged that many of the Federal Trade Commission's regulations are "utterly ridiculous" yesterday in an address before the Conference of Small Business Organizations here.

The conference opened its three-day meeting at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Senator Capehart declared the regulations favor businessmen with money at the expense of small operators. The average businessman is "bogged down" with regulations which are "wholly unecessary, and sometimes harmful," he said.

The 200 small businessmen were welcomed by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), who told them the bigness of Government is "one of those things we cannot do anything about."

Discussing the works of the National Munitions Board, its director, Lieut. Gen. Le Roy Lutes, said it now has 57 programs with 450 projects now underway. Largest of these is a $2,500,000,000 aircraft program, which he said is "the only large military production program today."

United action is the only way small business has to solve its problems, Fred A. Virkus, chairman of the organization said. He declared planned economy is not inevitable in America, "but it is a most serious threat."

Today's speakers include Representative Noah M. Mason (R., Ill.) who will discuss "The Biggest Business on Earth" at luncheon, and Representative Ed Gossett (D., Tex.), speaker at the annual dinner.

Continuation Of Freedom Train Voted

Congress yesterday gave final approval to a bill authorizing $2,500,000 for operating the Freedom Train until July 5, 1951.

The Senate adopted the bill by unanimous consent after trimming $500,000 from the amount approved by the House.

The House then agreed with the Senate change, and cleared the measure by a voice vote. The bill now goes to the White House.

Under the measure, operation of the Freedom Train would be directed by the Archivist of the United States and a commission of members of Congress, Federal officials, and five persons to be appointed by the President.

The Freedom Train has been financed and operated since September, 1947, by the American Heritage Foundation, a private group organized for the purpose. The train ended its tour January 22 in Washington.

GI Introduces Himself To Queen Elizabeth

King's Lynn, Eng., Feb. 19 (AP).—An Iowa GI broke the ice with Queen Elizabeth.

Doing something no English subject would dream of, he stepped up and introduced himself.

Sergt. Charles Smith of Cedar Rapids saw her touring King's Lynn's 800-year-old fair last Saturday. He asked her to pose for a snapshot, and she did, smilingly.

Then they had a little chat.

"A very charming person," Smith decided.

or his office, Smith said. He lives at 4512 Edmunds st. nw.)

Counts had appeared without counsel, had withdrawn an earlier plea of innocent and had entered a plea of nolo contendere. He told the court that his attorney, Clifton A. Woodrum, jr., son of a former Virginia Congressman, had withdrawn from the case. Judge Warlick accepted the plea after telling Counts it was tantamount to a plea of guilty.

When Claxton, under questioning by Assistant United States Attorney Robert N. Pollard, jr., reached the part of his testimony regarding the alleged payments, Counts jumped up to interrupt.

"Just a minute, Mr. Counts," said Pollard, "you may question the witness when I am through."

Counts resumed his seat temporarily, but when Pollard ceased his questioning, the defendant walked to the bench and asked the court to "stop this case where it is and let me have an attorney."

"I didn't understand that this testimony was to be brought out and I can't defend myself against it at this time, Count said. He then asked to change his plea back to innocent and for jury trial.

Claxton's testimony was to the effect that Counts was a commission salesman for the Roanoke Welding and Equipment Co. in 1943, the year in which the Government charges he concealed a part of his income. Claxton said the sum allegedly understated represented commissions paid to Counts for contracts obtained.

Asked what explanation had been offered by the taxpayer for the alleged understatement, Claxton said Counts told him the sum represented "the approximate amount he had to pay off to officials in Washington to get these contracts."

"Did he mention any individuals?" he was asked.

Claxton replied that Counts told him the arrangements were made through Senator Glass. He quoted Counts that some of the amounts were paid to Senator Glass and some paid to persons designated by the Senator.

Claxton added that Counts told him it was his understanding that the amounts paid were to be used "for State campaign purposes." He further quoted Counts as giving the total of the amounts at $15,800.

(Mrs. Katherine Lemon Carr, president of Oren Roanoke Corp., successor to Roanoke Welding and Equipment Co., said yesterday in Roanoke that Senator Glass was never mentioned in connection with contracts obtained from the Government. She described the report as "preposterous.")

Transit Strike in Italy

Rome, Feb. 21 (AP).—Streetcar and interurban train traffic was crippled in many parts of Italy today when 50,000 workers walked out in a 24-hour strike against proposed layoffs.

Blood Death Award Won

donor program of the District Red Cross.

Attorney David G. Bress claimed the hospital was responsible for negligence on the part of a hospital laboratory technician, who failed to follow recommended methods for interpreting the routine Rh factor tests.

The technician, Mrs. Donna McPherson, 6511 Fairfax rd. Bethesda, Md., failed to identify Mrs. Verona Phillips' blood as Rh-negative, after the tests were made, and the woman consequently received a transfusion of her husband's Rh-positive blood.

The plaintiff produced a death certificate, signed by attending physician, Dr. William Aud, which stated the immediate cause of Mrs. Phillips death on November 21, 1946, was a "transfusion reaction" which lasted four hours. The certificate stated she was suffering from a lobar pneumonia condition, at the time.

Tests of blood taken from Mrs. Phillips' after her death established that she had Rh-negative blood, according to testimony by Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, jr., pathologist.

Testimony of Employe

In the trial before District Court Judge Jennings Bailey, Mrs. McPherson testified she was employed by the hospital in September, 1946, and that her only experience with the Rh factor tests was acquired in performing 6 to 12 such tests at the hospital.

Mrs. McPherson, who later left her job at the hospital to have a child, admitted under cross-examination that she had failed to follow two recommended procedures in interpreting Mrs. Phillips' tests:

(1) Use of control bloods, which she omitted.

(2) "Gross" examination of the blood mixture in the test tube for evidence of "clumping," which signifies absence of the Rh factor. Mrs. McPherson said she examined several drops of the blood under a microscope and classified the blood as Rh-positive on this basis.

Dr. Thomas Cajigas, staff pathologist at the hospital, who supervises operation of the blood laboratory and receives 50 per cent of laboratory fees in excess of certain fixed hospital costs, testified he had instructed the girl to use both recommended procedures.

Cornelius, Doherty, defendant's attorney, attempted to show that definite proof of the cause of Mrs. Phillips' death was not available, since no autopsy had been performed, at the request of her husband.

Two witnesses for the plaintiff, Dr. Hunter, and Dr. Richard Kelso, pathologist, stated that symptoms suffered after the transfusion by Mrs. Phillips might also have been caused by a pulmonary embolism.

Phillips, a psychiatric social worker for the Virginia State Department of Mental Hygiene and Hospitals, sued for $10,000, statutory limit on damages in negligent death actions at the time Mrs. Phillips' death occurred. Phillips has two children, Verona, 5 and Paul, 3.

President Confers With Gen. Young

'Help Communists'

Library Aide Says Bigots Are Traitors

Persons who indulge in religious or racial intolerance should be classified as traitors, Dr. Ernest S Griffith, director o legislative research of the Library of Congress, said yesterday.

Because intolerance creates weak spots in our social structure which Communists use to great effect in the cold war, bigots, in effect, are working for the Communists, Dr. Griffith said, speaking at the annual Salute to Brotherhood Week meeting of the Advertising Club of Washington.

During the Statler Hotel gathering, Mrs. Verna D. Linzel, director of the Washington area office of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, presented the NCCJ's Distinguished Merit Award to radio station WWDC for "meritorious contribution throughout the year to the cause of brotherhood."

The station last year broadcast five 15-minute Brotherhood Week programs, a National Negro Health Week program and several spot announcements.

Today's Brotherhood Week schedule calls for a showing of the film, "Don't Be a Sucker" at 8 p. m. at the YWCA.

At the President's request, Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young yesterday had a 15-minute "District affairs" chat with Mr. Truman.

As Brig. Gen. Young left the White House, he told reporters that "the President had called me in to discuss District affairs." He declined to elaborate.

Since a White House meeting on routine District affairs normally would fall to John Russell Young, President of the Board of District Commissioners, informed sources speculated that the President had asked General Young for advice on the latter's successor.

In line with Army policy, General Young is slated to return to active duty with Army troops, probably overseas, within a few months.

General Young was appointed to the top District engineering post in September, 1945, three years and four-and-one-half months ago. In the past the Army usually has rotated general officers in this civilian post every three years. Final selection for the District job rests with the President.

Local political observers also noted, following Young's White House meeting yesterday, that the President is faced with another important District Building decision—Commissioner John Russell Young's term expires on April 17.

Within eight weeks Mr. Truman must therefore recommend the reappointment of J. R. Young or seek a successor to preside over the city's Board of Commissioners.

The Senate Judiciary Committee acted yesterday to help operators of gold mines which were closed down during the war.

It approved a bill which would authorize the Secretary of Treasury to pay reparations in cases where it was found the operators had suffered damages through the close-down.

Van Opel Loses Suit for U. S.-Held Millions

Fritz von Opel, European financier-sportsman, lost his District Court fight yesterday to regain more than four million dollars in securities held by the Alien Property Custodian.

Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws found that "enemy taint" was indicated in the ownership of Von Opel's firm, Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G.

Von Opel sought to avoid the stigma of German nationality in the case by showing that, though born in Germany, in 1939 he became a citizen of Liechtenstein and was a neutral.

But Judge Laws found that the industrialist's neutrality consisted merely of paying $10,000 and signing formal documents. According to the evidence, he had never been in Liechtenstein for more than a few hours at a time.

The judge stated:

"He has never taken an oath of allegiance to Liechtenstein or formally renounced citizenship in Germany. Statements made by Fritz von Opel after 1939 . . . indicate a continued allegiance to and sympathy for Germany. In technical form, Fritz von Opel is a citizen of a neutral country, but I find beyond doubt his fealty at all times has been to his native country of Germany."

The Uebersee company is Swiss by charter, the court found, but during the war operated bauxite mines in Hungary for German manufacture of aluminum.

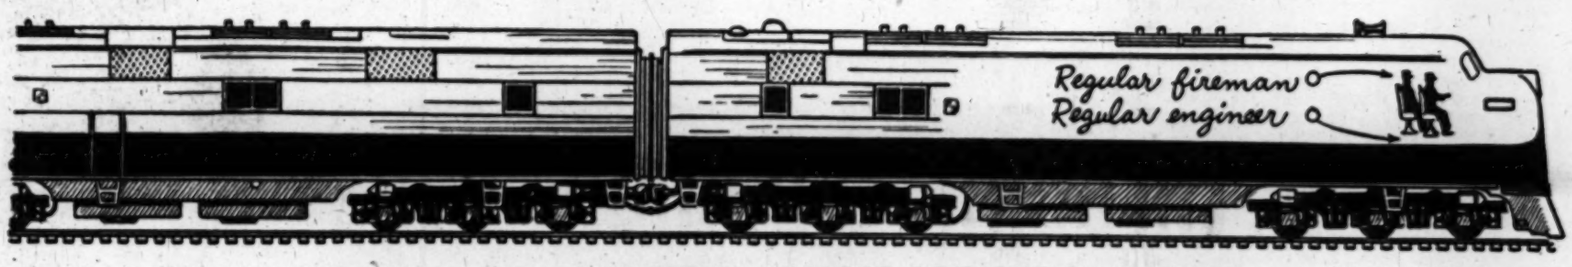
DIESEL LOCOMOTIVES HAUL MORE GOODS AND PASSENGERS...

...WITH GREATER SAFETY AND COMFORT FOR EVERYBODY



BECAUSE OF ITS MODERN, ALMOST FOOLPROOF DESIGN, THE DIESEL IS PRACTICALLY AUTOMATIC!

Yet leaders of two railroad unions demand extra men on diesels!

Just plain feather-bedding—here's why!

Here's the truth about diesel locomotives.

Diesel locomotives are equipped with every modern device for maximum safety. They have automatic controls. They can be operated safely by one man. But two men—an engineer and a fireman — are now employed on a diesel road locomotive.

Diesel locomotives—adopted by the railroads as one way of improving their service to you—have hauled millions of passengers in recent years with one of the best safety records in railroad history!

They have pulled millions of tons of freight millions of miles—also with one of the best safety records in railroad history!

Full Pay—No Work!

Leaders of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen are now demanding an extra engineer and an extra fireman on diesels, claiming the extra men are needed. But the facts prove these men are not needed. They would just be drawing full pay for doing no work.

The railroads are placing an ever-increasing number of diesels in service—both passenger and freight. These trains are operated at speeds consistent with safety and good service—and on both counts their record tops all public transportation.

Feather-Bedding Is Against Public Interest!

If the ridiculous demands of these union leaders were granted, it would mean paying out millions in wages to men not needed in diesel locomotives.

The leaders of the Engineers' Union have threatened to call a strike to enforce their "feather-bedding" demands. Nevertheless the railroads are resisting—and will continue to resist—such "make-work" schemes which require payment for work not done—schemes which are contrary to the interest of the whole American people.

HERE ARE THE FACTS!

1. The safety record of trains pulled by diesel locomotives is the best of all public transportation.
2. Diesel locomotives provide the best working conditions locomotive engineers and firemen have ever enjoyed: comfort, cleanliness, ease of operation, maximum safety.
3. Diesel locomotives are maintained at peak operating efficiency.
4. The diesel is virtually automatic. It is equipped with the most modern safety appliances.
5. The diesel locomotive is the last word in railroad efficiency, safety and comfort.

We are publishing this and other advertisements to talk with you at first hand about matters which are important to everybody.

Aid Is Asked For All Needy

within specified limits, when the State paid the medical bill for a needy person to the doctor or the hospital.

Federal assistance for State welfare services for adults, families and children. First year's Federal outlay for this purpose would be 24 million dollars. The present Federal authorization for child welfare services only is $3,500,000.

The second bill, dealing mainly with old age, death and disability insurance, would repeal the Eightieth Congress' Gearhart resolution, excluding nearly 750,000 independent salesmen from the program, and extend coverage to nearly all types of labor.

Here is how benefits would be increased for retired persons in four sample wage brackets, who have been paying the security tax for 12 years:

Present Law

Average Monthly Wage	Single Person 65 and over	Couple 65 and over
$100	$28.00	$42.00
200	39.20	58.80
300	44.80	67.20
400	44.80	67.20

Proposed Legislation

Average Monthly Wage	Single Person 65 and over	Man 65 and over, and wife, 60 and over
$100	$46.20	$63.30
200	63.00	94.50
300	79.80	119.70
400	96.20	144.90

The retirement age for men would remain at 65, but for women employes, widows and wives it would be reduced from 65 to 60.

A retired beneficiary could earn up to $50 a month instead of $14.99 as at present, without loss of his benefits.

A lump sum burial benefit equal to three months insurance benefit would be paid in all cases where a person dies insured. The present law provides for a lump sum payment only in case no monthly insurance benefit is payable.

Doughton's statement explained disability insurance proposals as follows:

"1. Employes covered by old age insurance (except Federal and military employes) are to be covered for short-time sickness benefits, and all employes and the self-employed to be covered for extended disability insurance.

"2. Benefits for short periods of disability are to be based upon the previous wages and number of dependents of the disabled person with a weekly minimum of $8. The maximum is $30 per week for a single person and $45 for a person with three or more dependents.

"Benefits for extended periods of disability are to be computed the same as those for old age and survivors' insurance—that is, in relation to the amount of the insured persons wages, length of time in the insurance system, and the number of dependents."

Give To Enjoy

A new spirit seems to have pervaded the National Symphony Orchestra's sustaining fund campaign this year. One evidence is in the campaign slogan itself: "Give to enjoy." Last year the emphasis was on saving the symphony. Now that essentially negative appeal has been discarded for an ambitious, forward-looking approach that stresses the enjoyment the orchestra brings to the community. The revived enthusiasm has borne fruit, at least in the number of contributors. At the most recent accounting some 2203 persons had given to the fund as compared with 1575 at the same time in last year's drive.

The emphasis on the positive benefits of the symphony is reflected in the broader type of programs to be offered. Four outstanding guest conductors have been announced—Beecham, Szell, Mitropoulos and Ansermet. Past conflicts have been buried, and the orchestra's backers are staking their plans on the potential for growth of the orchestra here rather than on compromise proposals such as a merger with Baltimore. As always, however, the realization of this potential depends on support by the people of Washington. And, despite the encouraging start, the campaign has not yet reached half its $190,000 goal, with but a few days left. The orchestra has no elaborate campaign machinery. Therefore, its financial success depends upon volunteer contributors who do not wait to be asked. The symphony needs both the large donors who have rallied generously in the past as well as a broad base of individual contributions from a dollar up. If every Washingtonian who has enjoyed and benefited from the cultural stimulus which the National Symphony has brought to this community would respond to the sustaining fund appeal, the orchestra would have no cause for worry.

Executive Pay

While Senator Lucas' bill to increase the salaries of top Government executives, District classified employes and members of the Foreign Service has not yet had full committee consideration, its companion measure in the House hit a snag last Tuesday. Subcommittee members of the House Civil Service Committee are reported to have agreed that District employes and Foreign Service people should get the retroactive $330 raise others received last July. But they couldn't agree on raising the salaries of about 223 executives in the Administration. Republican members of the subcommittee or some of them are said to be thinking of offering only a cost-of-living adjustment for these responsible officials.

This is a peculiar change of heart and mind since last November 2 on the part of the Republicans. In the last session of Congress the Republican leadership was all set to approve the measure, and it would have gone through had it been introduced early enough to get ahead of the legislative rush before adjournment. As it happened, it was held back too long, making it necessary for the G. O. P. leaders in Congress, in collaboration with Governor Dewey, to schedule it as No. 1 legislation for the Republican-to-be Eighty-first Congress.

As it happened, also, the Republicans came in second, and the responsibility for running an efficient Federal Government for the next four years fell not on Mr. Dewey but on Mr. Truman. And so the Republicans seem to have lost interest.

Here, surely, is a problem where concern for the national good should govern instead of partisan spite. At any rate, this is the case with the Hoover Commission, which has shown steadfast and strong support for executive salary increases. The contrast between the Hoover Commission and Republican leadership is marked. Indeed, the vigorous and carefully studied urgings of the Hoover Commission stand in contrast as well with the rather lackadaisical attitude of many Democratic leaders in Congress on this point. Mr. Truman got his raise, and a very handsome one it was, at the start. So did Vice President Barkley and Speaker Rayburn. It behooves them to press unremittingly for adjustment in the salaries of their administrative subordinates.

There are other reasons than salary, of course, involved in any man's decision to enter or remain in public employ. The motive of unselfish public service is an important attraction, and the insecurity of reputation against irresponsible smears is an equally important detraction. But concern for good government demands that Federal salaries all along the line be brought into closer relation both with the responsibilities involved in running the public business and with the compensation offered in private business.

Filial Reflections

This two hundred and seventeenth anniversary of the birth of George Washington has, we think, something more than the perfunctory interest which ordinarily attaches to the celebration of the national holiday. For one thing, the sesquicentennial anniversary of Washington's death will occur this year; for another, today is the first general occasion of homage to Washington's memory since the publication a few months ago of the first volume of the elaborate biography projected by the eminent Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman; for yet another Washington's Birthday coincides this year with a public campaign for the preservation of the Woodlawn mansion and estate in Fairfax County.

The point about the Freeman biography is that it strives to remove Washington from the category of mythological figures into that of human beings, and invests him with his full share of the passions and weaknesses common to the race of men. Dr. Freeman shows us the younger Washington as one whose main preoccupation was the increase of his wealth, and also as one whose political judgments might be influenced by private interests and personal resentments. All this, of course, is not necessarily to Washington's discredit, or at worst it means merely that in these respects he was very like most of his neighbors; but it does conflict at many points with his legend.

The truth seems to be that by a general agreement among his contemporaries, and including even his political adversaries, it was decided to endow Washington with all the virtues upon which his age set special store. It will be interesting to see how far, if at all, the legend is modified by Dr. Freeman's relations. It would also be interesting if we could discover how far Dr. Freeman's own attitude toward his subject has been subconsciously influenced by the great change of historical climate in the 150 years since the death and apotheosis of Washington. The twentieth century takes a far less optimistic view of human nature than was prevalent in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, and this cannot have failed to affect our attitude toward the question of greatness in human beings, and especially in public men.

The point about Woodlawn is that it was originally part of the Mount Vernon plantation and that it was the land bequeathed by Washington his nephew, Maj. Lawrence Lewis, and to Nelly Custis, daughter of Washington's stepson, John Parke Custis. Nelly Custis was given in marriage by Washington to Major Lewis at Mount Vernon just 150 years ago today; and this is said to have been the last occasion when the general wore his famous Continental uniform. The magnificent house subsequently built on Gray's Hill within sight of the Potomac was designed by Thornton from crude plans prepared by Washington himself. It is considered one of the finest examples of neo-palladian domestic architecture in the United States.

Most Washingtonians, no doubt, remember that Woodlawn was for many years the residence of the late Senator Oscar Underwood. Some time ago, under court order, the sale of Woodlawn to a Belgian order of Roman Catholic missionaries was negotiated, as part of a general liquidation of Mrs. Underwood's estate, ordered by the courts. The missioners, however, have agreed to withdraw their offer and to seek headquarters elsewhere if funds for the purchase of Woodlawn can be raised by private subscription. The campaign to raise them seems likely to succeed, and it is interesting to observe among the sponsors of the movement the name of Dr. Freeman. What will be even more interesting is to learn precisely what use the foundation intends to make of Woodlawn, if and when it is acquired.

WHO's Loss

Up till last Tuesday the World Health Organization had 58 member nations and a unique distinction. It was the only one of the nine specialized international agencies set up under the United Nations to which the Soviet Union, the Ukrainian S. S. R., and the Byelorussian S. S. R. belonged. It shared this distinction with the Universal Postal Union and the International Telecommunications Union, to be sure; but these are both of pre-UN vintage and the Russians belonged to them before the war.

Now the Kremlin, echoed dutifully by its two internal satellite "nations," has given notice of resignation from WHO. The reasons offered are that the organization is not fulfilling its functions and that its "swollen administrative machinery" costs more than member nations can bear. The second allegation comes with peculiar ineptness from three governments that have never handed over their contributions to the WHO budget. The first charge seems little more graceful, though there seems some difference of opinion as to whether the Big, Little, and White Russians have or have not contributed cheerfully to the staffing of the organization.

The charter of WHO does not provide in any way for the withdrawal of a member nation, and on this basis the officers are attempting to persuade the three recusant nations to cancel their resignations. It is, however, a weak hope. The United States joined with the congressional reservation that it have the right to withdraw on one year's notice, and though Moscow protested this at the time it is now walking out the door we kept open for ourselves.

It is too early to say what this move portends, but an exodus of the Soviets from the United Nations itself does not seem very likely. A more significant index may come from future action by the non-Russian satellite nations of eastern Europe. All of them are still members of WHO and of several of the other specialized agencies. Poland and Czechoslovakia, for instance, belong to the whole roster except IRO and ITO. Yugoslavia, whose satellite status is now in doubt, is a member of most of them. If these nations show signs of falling away, it will be evidence that the Kremlin has decided that the United Nations is useful to it primarily as a machine for keeping the world politically agitated and not for cementing the foundations of human welfare and peace.

The Power Of Unity

Straight thinking about the proposed Atlantic Pact has to begin, in our opinion, by taking it out of a strictly military context. The effect of the pact will be, we hope, to combine the moral and military strength of western Europe and North America in resistance to any aggression, potential or actual, against any part of the so-called Atlantic community. But this does not mean that future decisions as between war and peace—in short, decisions as to the future destiny of the world—shall be made by military minds acting in immediate response to certain danger signals.

Some commentators have pictured the United States as helplessly debating the issue of war while an enemy is annihilating our natural allies with atomic bombs. To us that danger seems nonexistent. If an atomic attack should be launched against any of the Atlantic Pact countries, the first blow would undoubtedly be aimed at the United States itself. Since this country is the nucleus of power today, no enemy intent on conquering the democratic world could afford to aim its initial devastating blow at a lesser target. Moreover, the Russians' first step in any such war would doubtless be to occupy all western Europe. They would scarcely atom bomb the peoples whose cooperation they would be seeking. In all probability their surprise blow would fall upon American strategic centers, and our response would be as instantaneous as it was at Pearl Harbor.

If an attack should come against any other nation in the group, the United States would have to decide in consultation with its allies what its response would be. Decisions of this sort cannot be made automatically; nor can they rest upon the word of one man unless the democracies, in frantic fear of communism, should resign control over their destiny into the hands of military oligarchs. Since the essence of what we are trying to protect is freedom and representative government, decisions of this sort must necessarily be made by civilian officials, i.e. the President, aided by his advisers, and Congress. Some day we hope that a civilian government, with an executive and a law-making body, will have control over the democratic world. But until that day comes power to control all military operations must be kept strictly in the hands of civilian officials in the respective democratic capitals.

We do not think this means intolerable delay in the response of the democratic powers to totalitarian attack. History lends no support to the idea of Congress debating while the world is on fire. In the case of World War I, when the emergency was not acute in the sense of timing, the declaration of war was signed four days after Congress was summoned. With the present air travel, Congress could be summoned in a day and declare war that night if the national interest should so dictate. The important factor, we think, is not the mechanics of getting our armed forces in motion but maintenance of a unity of interest among democratic peoples. If that sense of a common cause remains as strong as it is today, joint action can be relied upon regardless of what the specific language of the Atlantic Pact may be.

A military alliance that might become a sort of Atlantic Maginot Line would be an actual menace. Words in a treaty, important though they are, will not stop totalitarian aggression. Only a continued sense of unity among like-minded peoples can do that. In our opinion, it is this sense of unity in upholding the principles of the United Nations Charter that the Atlantic Pact should enshrine. It cannot possibly guarantee every signatory against invasion. But it can guarantee joint resistance to aggression so long as the present community of interest lasts. And that is the strongest barrier which can be erected against the Soviet menace without turning the democratic countries into armed camps and making them fertile fields for Communist fifth columns.

PURSUIT

Where the unicorn goes
There go I
Through golden hills
Where peacocks ply,

Where moonlight hangs
Like heavy fruit
In a topaz tree
With a silver root.

I follow the golden
Hoof and horn
Through asphodel
And sleeping corn,

But he goes stepping
Soft as light
In the secret acres
Of the night.

I hear the frenzy
Of his breath
Beside the small
Quick feet of death,

And I am lost
And left behind,
Prisoned where he Goes unconfined.

Department Of Culture

Many civilized nations devote specialized executive government attention not only, as our country does, to commerce, agriculture and labor but specifically to still other functional sectors in the national life, such as education, the arts, the sciences, justice and social welfare.

We have certainly not been backward in fostering similar interests, but we have done so incidentally and not so systematically. For example, the U. S. Office of Education and Social Security are tucked away in a Federal Security Agency of non-Cabinet rank; the advancement of public health and medical research are scattered among the FSA's Public Health Service and several units of such different departments as Army and Navy, not to speak of the Food and Drug unit in the Department of Agriculture. The arts and sciences have occasionally received some benefit from temporary organizations like WPA (in the Federal Works Agency), and very widely scattered technological research projects.

I submit that national interest and security would in the long run be more fruitfully served if, by one conservative step at a time perhaps, the executive branch of the Government were expanded, so as to afford explicit highest-level research and coordination service to still other functional aspects of the population and life of our country. A striking example of that neglected area is the approximately 10 per cent of our working population embodying neither farmers, nor industrial wage earners, nor businessmen—namely, the largely self-employed professional classes.

This writer has long advocated something in the nature of a department of the professions—or of the arts, sciences and professions. Possibly an auspicious start could be made in that direction by inaugurating even subordinate divisions or bureaus of that kind, more affirmatively and systematically than heretofore, in at least one new Government department of Cabinet rank.

Your newspaper, for example, has repeatedly urged a new department of welfare, naturally growing out of and absorbing the present Federal Security Agency. Possibly a new department of welfare might include a recognized division of the arts, sciences and professions, instead of, or expanding, the office of education.

Landlords' Rights

Why should the greedy landlord be expected to sell you rent at the 1941 prices, when you pay more for everything else?

Any tenant, no matter how unfair, knows that the landlord is entitled to a reasonable rent increase to help compensate for the increased expenses. If not, would the tenant be willing to have a law passed returning rent to his 1941 earning capacity?

The writer owns an apartment house. I went before the rent control board and was allowed $1 per month per apartment—$1 on an apartment renting for $36.50 and $1 on an apartment renting for $60 per month. The increase on entire building was just about enough to take care of increased taxes.

The intelligent way to settle this matter fairly is to give a gradual increase until there is a balance between supply and demand. Or would the Government be willing to subsidize the landlord?

Danger In DPs

This country already has more than its optimum population and there is every indication that we shall not be able to support our population in another hundred years. Further, our country has never been able to weld itself into a homogeneous Nation because of the constant influx of "isms" which have come with every generation of foreigners.

One would have to be very naive to believe that among the displaced persons there are not many planted Communists, in spite of the screening process to which they are subjected. The United States, whatever pity it has for these people, owes them nothing. We have already done more than our share in helping them. It is time we recognized a duty to this country and to the welfare of future generations, who are going to be saddled with the results of a short-sighted immigration policy.

Baby Bonus

Malvina Lindsay's article of February 19 does not convince me that a baby bonus is the solution to the problem. The father of three children and in modest circumstances, I am nevertheless firmly opposed to the proposal for the following reasons:

1. To provide a permanent stimulus to the birthrate in the face of our vanishing resources is an invitation to disaster.

2. To encourage people of low ability to continue the growing imbalance in the quality of our population is incalculably greater folly than the haphazard breeding of stock.

3. To tax our economy with such a subsidy added to other existing and proposed relief can lead only to collapse.

4. To encourage parents to have more children than they can possibly provide with adequate love, companionship and training, not to speak of material advantages, is little short of a crime in its effect on the family, community and country.

Instead of a subsidy, let the various agencies of society cooperate in a program to help people plan their lives according to the best concepts of religion allied with the best of our present knowledge of man and his world.

American Ships And ECA

I have read and reread the letter from Mr. Allen Pargellis published February 14. I would like to feel that he has perhaps unintentionally distorted the facts in connection with the opinions of labor, management and Government, that 50 per cent of the ECA cargoes be carried on American-flag ships.

Mr. Pargellis's letter makes the point that certain European countries rely upon shipping services to achieve a balance of payments. In that connection, the improved situation of many European countries is noteworthy. Official British sources report that on the basis of the first half of 1948, British receipts from shipping alone were running at an annual rate of 66 million pounds over expenditures, while in 1938 receipts ran only 20 million pounds over expenditures.

Swedish shipping earnings in 1947 reached an all-time high of over 939 million kroner and doubtlessly continued to improve in 1948.

In the first half of 1948, the net revenue from Norwegian shipping was approximately 400 million kroner, but net revenue in dollars had decreased from the 1947 level because of increased expenditures of dollars by shipping countries abroad—a situation all shipowners face, regardless of nationality—and because of the refusal of non-Norwegian shippers, who previously had paid freight in dollars, to continue to do so.

The essential point is that the revenue earned by foreign shipping countries, which can be expected to be used to bring international payments in balance, is far more dependent upon the total volume of world trade than upon what share of world shipping goes to the American merchant marine.

On the other hand, the participation of United States flag vessels in the transport of a substantial portion of our foreign commerce is of major importance to our national interest. It is important as a factor of preparedness against emergency and a direct contribution to the development of our peacetime commerce by providing regular, direct and dependable steamship services. These factors cannot be measured in specific amounts, but their importance should not be ignored.

Mr. Pargellis quotes the differential between the rates on American and foreign ships at $4.50 per ton for coal. Insofar as we have been able to determine, only three vessels were booked at this differential some months ago. Since that time rates on foreign vessels have increased by $3.20 per ton. We have prepared accurate data showing that payments to the Maritime Commission of charter hire and United States Treasury receipts of corporate and personal income taxes from shipping companies and maritime labor results in there being no excess, in terms of dollars, to the American taxpayer because of the use of American vessels as compared with foreign vessels.

Mr. Pargellis intimates that the Bland bill will thwart the restoration of the prewar level of the European merchant fleets. It may be interesting to note that the total fleet of the Marshall Plan countries, including those vessels which are currently under construction, is almost 6½ million deadweight tons over the level that they possessed in 1939, and, if anything, the Marshall Plan has encouraged excessive foreign vessel construction. No important segment of European economy has recovered as well as has its maritime industries.

While many and varied reasons, accompanied by reliable facts and statistics, have been advanced by the United States Maritime Commission, the shipping industry, labor, and others convinced that American ships should receive a 50 per cent participation in the ECA cargoes, it is strange to find that there have been no supporting factual arguments to the contentions made by relatively few that American shipping should not thus participate.

Washington Calling

Resources Board

EVER SINCE VJ-Day, a kind of cold war has gone on inside the Government here in Washington between military and civilian. Over control and direction of rearmament and over occupation policy in Germany and Japan the skirmishes have been hottest.

This is, of course, putting it too simply. But nevertheless the general lines of the contest are fairly clear, and it is something new in American life.

The controversy over confirmation of Mon C. Wallgren, President Truman's good friend, to be chairman of the National Security Resources Board does not at first glance fit into the pattern of this contest. It is, however, as a skirmish in the war that certain of the President's closest advisers see the Wallgren row.

The first chairman of the newly created Security Resources Board was Arthur M. Hill, who resigned on December 15. Hill, head of the Greyhound Bus Co., was considered by some in the White House to be under the domination of Secretary of Defense James Forrestal.

Forrestal had proposed that Hill, as head of the new board, should be near his office in the Pentagon. It was suspected that Forrestal wanted to make the NSRB, with its far-reaching assignment looking to the integration of industry and natural resources for national defense, into a sideshow of the military.

Therefore when Hill resigned, after 15 months as chairman, the determination was to get a man for the job who would be independent of both military and big business control. As part of the process of freeing the board from the dominating influence of the Forrestal-Pentagon axis, the board's offices had been moved to the old State Department building next door to the White House.

THE PRESIDENT himself selected his friend, Wallgren, for the $14,000 chairmanship. They had served together on the Truman War Investigating Committee and, as Wallgren put it, his great and good friend was drafting him to do the same kind of searching inquiry in the present period that is neither peace nor war.

But, as Wallgren showed on the witness stand, he knows little about the organization of American industry either in war or in peace. In fact, it was difficult to discover what the former Governor from the State of Washington did know.

Democratic Senators expressing nervousness over Wallgren's qualifications and his performance in the all-important job are being reassured. The Bureau of the Budget, so the White House line goes, will exercise close supervision over the work of the Security Resources Board. As chairman, Wallgren will be able to lean heavily on the able and efficiently staffed Budget Bureau.

While it may work out like that, this does not seem to me to be the best way to build up the civilian side of the Government so that in the long tradition of this country civilians can continue to fix major policies. The alternative is not necessarily a pleasant politician with an undistinguished record in a succession of public offices.

THERE IS little or no doubt that Wallgren will be confirmed. The chief opposition has come from Senator Harry Cain of Washington, who frightens his Republican colleagues into nervous tremors because of his sometimes erratic course. The Democrats are sitting back smugly content to let Cain "blow off."

During his interrogation, Wallgren said that, after all, the job he was being considered for was only advisory. Technically that is true, although it is also true that recently the NSRB considered giving the chairmanship direct authority to make contracts and then decided against such a step.

Actually, the chairman makes recommendation for action—on stockpiling, the development of resources, and so on—to the President, who authorizes one of the executive departments to carry out the recommendation. In practice, of course, the chairman would be the only official to have all the information and it is unlikely that his recommendations would be challenged.

If in the present troubled state of the world, the civilian side of the Government is to maintain its proper constitutional authority, it must show up in performance a lot better than in the Wallgren episode. Too often since the end of the war civilian authority has defaulted, leaving a vacuum that was necessarily filled by the military. Occupied Germany is a good example. No war was ever won with one side in apologetic retreat.

Restaurants For All

I have just returned from a week in Chicago where I had my meals in a variety of eating places from cafeterias to hotel dining rooms, all located in the Loop. In all of these there were Negro diners. No plaster fell from the ceiling, no riots occurred, no one was embarrassed; all, I presume, enjoyed their meals and certainly all meals were paid for.

Who is the first restaurant owner in Washington to have the decency, if that is what is needed, or the courage, if that is required, or the good business sense, which seems to be lacking, to open his doors to all citizens? RALPH K. MERKER.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Draper, Clay And Acheson

AT THE end of last week the President accepted the resignation of the Undersecretary of the Army, Gen. William H. Draper, Jr. It is fair to say that this is one of those events which cast a long shadow ahead of them.

Lippmann

Mr. Draper is a faithful, effective and honorable public servant, the devoted friend of General Clay, formerly his principal adviser in Berlin, more recently his nominal superior in Washington. No one can replace him, and it is difficult to suppose that his resignation would have been offered or accepted if there were not a general agreement in all quarters that the transfer from the Army to the civilians of authority over German affairs cannot be postponed much longer.

THE UNITED STATES alone among the occupying powers has not yet brought its German affairs under the direct and undisputed control of the civilians who conduct foreign affairs. Thus General Robertson, the British commander in Germany, takes his orders, except on purely military matters, directly from the Foreign Office. But General Clay has been receiving his orders through Mr. Draper, who has been in effect General Clay's representative in Washington. As a result the policy of the United States in Germany has not been formed or managed by Mr. Byrnes, Mr. Marshall, or the State Department, but in fact by General Clay.

YET AS LONG as the State Department does not determine our German policy, it can never hope to have a successful European policy. Germany is the central problem of European security, of European reconstruction, and of our conflict with the Soviet Union. Until and unless Mr. Acheson can decide what are to be our relations with Germany, as he decides what are to be our relations with Britain, France, Scandinavia, or Yugoslavia, he will be like a man whose right hand is tied behind his back.

Yet it will not be easy now for the State Department to assume control over German affairs. The State Department has never had control. General Clay did not seek the control which he exercises. It has come to him because someone had to exercise power in Germany and there has been nobody in Washington who knew how or was willing to take the responsibility.

General Clay is a man of the very greatest ability—one of the strongest American figures of our time; he is also deeply imbued with the American tradition, and quite without vulgar ambition or delusions of grandeur. In no sense of the term has he usurped power. If he has acquired power—much more power than any general or any subordinate official ought to have—it is because there has been no one in Washington for the past three years who knew enough about Germany to argue with General Clay, or trusted his own judgment enough to overrule General Clay.

FOR THAT reason, though General Clay and everyone else knows that the State Department must take over in Germany, it is most difficult to see who is to take over and how it is to be done. There is, to speak frankly, no one in the higher reaches of the State Department, who knows as much about Germany as General Clay has learned in the past four years. It is not likely, therefore, that the State Department could administer successfully a policy which General Clay, and not the Department, has formed.

Our German policy is so intimately bound up with General Clay, is so much a matter of his special knowledge and unique position, that it would be a rash man indeed who thought he could carry on what General Clay has begun. If the policy to which we are committed in Germany can be made to work successfully, the chances are ten to one that only General Clay can make it work successfully.

THE CONCLUSION is therefore unavoidable, I think, that the State Department ought not to take the responsibility for Germany unless it is prepared to review and revise the American policy in Germany. If the policy is to remain essentially unchanged, it would be far wiser to leave the authority of General Clay unchanged. If the policy can succeed, he is best fitted to make it succeed, and should stay where he is. If it is doomed to fail, then any diminution of General Clay's authority will mean that the failure will be ascribed not to the errors of the policy but to the inefficiency of the State Department.

This means that the basic question which has to be decided is not whether the State Department shall take over from the Army. It is whether a change of authority is desirable because a change of policy is necessary.

THE DILEMMA of the State Department is a hard one. If it is to make important changes in our German policy, how can it persuade the country and Congress that the changes are necessary and that it knows what they ought to be? If there were any evidence of conflict between the judgment of the State Department and that of General Clay, the chances are that Mr. Acheson could not count on sufficient popular support for the State Department's views.

The dilemma could lead to a destructive debate. That should not be allowed to happen, and the one most likely way to avoid it would be to bring a fresh, disinterested, and respected judgment to bear upon the German question. The situation would seem to call for the appointment of a commission of eminent men, none of them now connected with the State Department or the Army or the committees of Congress that have dealt with Germany, to review our whole position in Germany. They ought to be able to provide a strong foundation for the transfer of authority and for the revision of the policy.

Bill to Outlaw Communists Passed by Maryland Senate

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21 (AP).—The Maryland Senate tonight passed the Ober bill aimed at driving the Communist Party out of the State.

The measure, approved by the Senate, 26-0, now goes to the House. It is expected to pass there without a hitch.

The measure calls for the dispersal of any subversive organization now existing or which shall come into existence.

Persons who knowingly join or remain members of subversive organizations could be fined up to $20,000 and imprisoned up to 20 years.

Loyalty Checks Provided

Loyalty checks of all State employes, including school teachers, also are provided.

A special assistant State attorney general would be named to look into reported cases of subversive activity. Grand jurors of all counties would be instructed to investigate and report on communistic activities.

A companion bill to revive the wartime antisabotage law, which expired in 1945, also went to the House.

Health Bill Opposed

A protest against federalization of medicine in the United States was filed tonight with the House of Delegates by two Democratic representatives.

Speaker C. Ferdinand Sybert and Delegate John C. Luber (D., Baltimore, 5th) submitted a resolution—which needs concurrent action of the Senate—setting forth:

"The experience of all countries where Government has assumed control of medical care has been progressive deterioration of the standards of that care to the serious detriment of the sick and the needy."

Americans enjoy the highest level of health and the finest standards of scientific care, the resolution said.

The greatest accomplishments, it added, have been under a "free profession working under a free system unhampered by Government control."

The Congress was asked "not to enact legislation that has been proposed, the effect of which will be to bring the practice of medicine in this country under Federal direction and control."

Maryland Bonus Bill Facing Veto by Lane

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21 (AP).—If pending legislation for a veterans' bonus gets through the General Assembly this session, it faces a gubernatorial veto.

Identical Senate and House measures call for a 100-million-dollar bond issue to pay from $10 to $500 to each Maryland veteran of World War II. The bond issue would be serviced from proceeds of the retail sales or real estate taxes.

"I must of necessity veto anything for which funds are not provided," Governor Lane told newsmen today.

The sales tax, he said, "is already dedicated to the budget." He described the real estate tax as the "core of the counties' economy."

Maryland Bill Would Freeze Representation

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21 (AP).—With only two dissenting votes, the Senate tonight passed and sent to the House a bill to freeze representation in the House at 123 delegates, the present number.

The vote was 24-2, Senators Ellison (R., Baltimore Fourth) and Turnbull (D., Baltimore) voting no. The bill to amend the State constitution carries a referendum provision.

Donaldson Asks $250 Million Increase in Postage Rates

Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson yesterday asked Congress to increase rates on nearly all types of mail except letters, effective July 1.

In a communication to House Speaker Sam Rayburn, Donaldson said the postoffice must take in 250 million dollars in extra revenue to cut down its operating deficit in fiscal year 1950.

He recommended:

1. A sharp increase in the complicated postage schedule for second class matter, which includes newspapers and periodicals. One postal official said the rise would amount to about 100 per cent.

2. Charging 2 cents for "penny" postcards.

3. Raising parcel post rates, now 10 to 18 cents for the first pound, to a higher scale, ranging from 15 to 25 cents, depending on zone.

4. A basic 25 cents special delivery fee (instead of 15 cents); higher fees for other special services. For example, a money order which now costs 6 cents, would cost 10 cents; registration fees would range from 35 cents to $2 instead of 25 cents to $1.50.

5. On third class mail (circulars, merchandise, miscellaneous printed matter) the cut rates for "bulk mailing" would be abolished, and the charge raised to a flat 2 cents for the first 2 ounces plus 1½ cents for each additional ounce.

Donaldson said that even with the higher charges, the Postoffice still will run about 150 million dollars in the red. He said the latter represents the cost of handling official mail, "franked" congressional mail, airline subsidies, and other overhead costs "not properly chargeable to users of postal service."

Maryland Senate Passes Bill For Patuxent River Bridge

By Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21.—The Maryland Senate tonight passed, 23 to 2, a bill authorizing a bridge across the Patuxent River.

A fight against the bill, which had been expected because of State roads commission opposition, failed to materialize.

The bill, which now goes to the house, provided for construction of a bridge across the river from Holland Point in Calvert County to Benedict on the Charles County side.

It would cost $2,500,000 and would be financed by a State bond issue to be repaid through tolls.

The bill was sponsored by State Senator Louis L. Goldstein (D., Calvert) and had the backing of all of the Southern Maryland Senators.

Senator Goldstein said the bridge will give more direct access to Southern Maryland's "unpolluted" water resorts and other vacation spots for thousands of Washington residents.

Four bills introduced by the Montgomery County delegation tonight were referred back to the delegation as a special committee.

The action in the case of two of the bills affecting fire taxing areas is expected to prepare the way for clarification of the question of whether the Montgomery County Council or the General Assembly should enact legislation affecting these areas.

One of the bills increases the fire tax area of the Cabin John Park Volunteer Fire Department, while another provides authority for setting up a retirement system for paid firemen of the Bethesda Fire Department.

The delegation now, acting as a committee, can refer the question to te attorney general of Maryland so that a definite opinion can be obtained on this particular type of legislation.

The constitutional amendment relating to charter governments reserves to the General Assembly legislation on "special taxing areas" but there is a question whether an area which merely collects a tax for a specific purpose such as those relating to fire taxes comes within the scope of this delineation of powers, Chairman Anders R. Lofstrand (R., Montgomery), said.

In another of the bills introduced tonight, authority would be conferred upon the Montgomery County Council to include employes of semipublic agencies partially or wholly supported by tax funds such as fire departments or public libraries, into the county's group life and health and hospitalization insurance.

The other bill introduced tonight would increase the pay of judges of the Montgomery County Orphans Court to $18 per day with a maximum of $2500 per year. The judges now receive $15 a day with an $1800 annual maximum.

The Montgomery County delegation also offered an amendment to a Senate bill which would authorize an increase in the pay of the clerks of the Circuit Court and raise the maximum for the Montgomery County clerk to $7500. He now gets $5400.

A bill providing for an increase of the annual salary of the supervisors of elections in Prince Georges County from their present $400 to $1000 a year, which came up for passage tonight, was recommitted to the elections committee for possible amendment concerning similar salaries for Allegany County.

...IT'S WONDERFUL!

U. S. And The Pact

By Sumner Welles

Having Or Eating Our Cake

THE AMERICAN people cannot postpone a decision upon the issues raised by the proposed North Atlantic Defense Pact.

The constitutional provision which prevents this Government from pledging a future Congress to wage war is a basic principle of our democratic system.

The past 40 years have, however, shown that if a major power fails to announce the causes for which it will resort to war, it is more likely to encourage than to prevent aggression.

Had Germany known that if she attacked France and Belgium Britain would go to their support, the First World War might have been avoided.

Had I been able, as President Roosevelt's representative, to tell Hitler in 1940 that the United States would in self-defense resist a Nazi attempt to dominate western Europe, the blitzkrieg might have been prevented.

The Kremlin is intensifying its aggressive expansion.

President Truman has announced his desire to negotiate with "a number of countries . . . a collective defense arrangement within the terms of the United Nations Charter."

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has declared that "the best deterrent to aggression is the certainty that immediate and effective countermeasures will be taken against those who violate the peace."

BUT, although we have been conferring with the western European countries for many months, dangerous confusion has suddenly arisen. A large part of the European press accuses us of "welshing" on our implicit commitments.

The Manchester Guardian is fully justified in complaining that "the negotiations . . . have obviously been bungled."

The Brussels pact for collective security was undertaken at our suggestion. It was concluded in the knowledge that even though all of the remaining western European nations were to adhere, this would not be sufficient to protect western Europe from Soviet attack unless military and material assistance were forthcoming from the United States.

The way in which we have handled these negotiations shows how fatal the effects must always be when American foreign policy is controlled by the armed services. Although we demanded far-reaching commitments from other countries, we failed to decide what commitments we ourselves were prepared to make. We failed to consider the hazards to which many European countries must be exposed unless we were prepared to back them until a defense pact had become operative. We forgot the axiom that collective security cannot succeed unless the countries joined in self-defense have available the strength required.

BUT THE further complaint of the Manchester Guardian that "the United States should not have forced the pact if it were not able to deliver the goods" is wholly unjustified.

All of the European governments are fully aware of the constitutional limitations imposed upon the American Executive.

They know that a regional pact concluded under Article 51 of the United Nations Charter—which provides for consultation in the event of attack, which establishes the principle of one for all and all for one, but which reserves to each state the right to determine when aggression has taken place and the nature of the assistance it will render in the common defense—represents as far-reaching a commitment as Washington can constitutionally make.

Yet in view of our conduct of these negotiations, in view of the suspicions that are undermining European confidence and in view of the isolationist interpretation given to recent statements made in the United States Senate, remedial action would seem to be essential.

When it was adopted by the Congress a few years ago, the Fulbright Resolution had great weight in Europe. It represented no legal commitment. But it did tell the European peoples that it was the sense of the American Congress that the United States must shoulder its world responsibilities through international cooperation.

EUROPEAN confidence would surely be rallied now were the present Congress to declare by joint resolution that it recognizes the pressing need for a North Atlantic Defense Pact and that, should the United States subsequently determine that one of the parties to such a pact had been the victim of aggression, the United States should then as a measure of self-defense render all possible assistance, including military support, in the common cause.

Such action would be entirely consistent with our national obligation under the United Nations Charter. It would create a healthy precedent. While it could not obligate the new Congress that will come into being in January, 1951, it would nevertheless dissipate much of the distrust of our intentions which the Soviet propagandists are so assiduously cultivating in western Europe.

Our own safety, the survival of the United Nations and the preservation of world peace demand a prompt and decisive solution of the present crisis.

We can no longer be safe unless a successful form of collective security is created. There can be no effective collective security unless we are willing and prepare to undertake the sacrifices and the risks involved. The American people must have learned that they cannot have their cake and eat it as they so often tried to do during the years between the two world wars by a foreign policy which was based on isolation and which sought to achieve security through such cheap and illusory safeguards as the Kellogg Pact.

President Signs Bill Extending Life of WAA

Legislation extending the life of the War Assets Administration to next June 30 was signed yesterday by President Truman.

Separate legislation financing the agency for the extra four months has passed the House and is before the Senate.

Court Orders Woodlawn Sold To Foundation for Shrine

Sale of Woodlawn, historic Virginia estate near Mount Vernon, to the Woodlawn Public Foundation, Inc., which plans to operate it as a public shrine was ordered yesterday by the Fairfax County Circuit Court.

The foundaion yesterday deposited $95,000 with the court and under a special arrangement worked out with the court-appointed commissioners of sale was given 90 days to work out means of paying the balance of the $170,000 purchase price.

Foundation officials said it was hoped that the money still needed could be raised through public subscription.

Although the foundation will not take title until arrangements for total payment have been made, it will take possession today in a public ceremony to be held at the estate at noon.

Woodlawn was the home of the late Senator and Mrs. Oscar W. Underwood.

Located on Route No. 1 just north of Fort Belvoir, the estate was given by George Washington as a wedding present to his adopted daughter, Nellie Custis.

The President's Calling List

10 a. m.—Vice President Barkley, Speaker Rayburn, Senator Lucas and Representative McCormack.

11—Committee of American Association of English-Jewish Newspapers.

11:15—Representative Albert (D., Okla.) et al.

11:30—Winners of "Voice of Democracy" Contest.

11:45—Brig. Gen. Gordon Young, D. C. Engineer Commissioner.

12 noon—The Postmaster General.

12:15 p. m.—Senator George (D., Ga.).

12:30—Secertary of State Acheson.

1—Lunch.

Whorf's Richard Doesn't Spit

By Richard L. Coe

ONE OF THE GREAT first nights of theatrical history was October 19, 1741, when, at a minor London theater called Goodman's Fields, "A Gentleman" was announced to appear in Shakespeare's "Richard III."

The "Gentleman" was one David Garrick and his London debut caused a sensation that theatrical historians still refer to in superlatives that would beggar a Hollywood press department.

The drama has now been revived by Richard Whorf, more recently associated with the movies as a director, and brought into New York's Booth Theater after a successful run as the final bill of Boston's failing Repertory Association.

I was delighted to have the chance to see this old warhorse in New York the other night. There are several heartening things about it, but on the whole I might as well confess I was disappointed.

"Richard III" is by no means great Shakespeare, though you do get a few crackling speeches. The curses of Queen Margaret on the "bunch-back'd toad"—"Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog" and "A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse" are lines that ring through the centuries. But the character of this lying son of ambition is entirely surface. Richard is too despicable a man to take seriously. The frightening in'rospection of the somewhat similar "Macbeth" is not in the play and it suffers accordingly.

To overcome this, Director Richard Barr accents the melodrama with a rush, that becomes simply tedious as the gory events wear on. But the important flaw in the playing seems to me to lie in the company's inability to spit out the lines at the required speed.

This brings up a subject dear to the heart of Producer Gilbert Miller, who's frankly hipped on the subject of training for actors. (At the slightest nod, Gilbert will give you a three-dollar lecture on the value of fencing as theatrical training.) But Miller's point on the poverty of our theatrical training grounds is well illustrated in this latest "Richard III."

That Villainous Microphone

These players are by no means negligible people. They're mostly all veterans of our theater and their success with the play under the Boston repertory system was deservedly impressive. But when it comes to rolling out the lines, making each word clear and the meaning definite, they simply haven't the breath or control to do it. This is a matter of technique, but it's vital. And in these days of facile microphone murmuring, the theater is becoming the loser.

The Boston-inspired production, albeit, is praiseworthy on several counts. Whorf's settings and costumes, Barr's direction and lighting have proved that it's perfectly possible to put on a costume play at reasonable cost and not look absurd. The color scheme of black, white, silver and red is handsomely suited to the royal bloodletting and the scene flow is neatly accomplished. There's a meaty background accompaniment from recordings of the Shostakovich Fifth which is impressive if bizarre.

The revival, by the way, will close at the Booth March 5, by which date it will have enjoyed the drama's longest New York run. John Barrymore played the evil monarch 27 performances a g nerr'on ago. The play was last done in America six years ago with George Coulouris as the King for 11 showings. At the moment Laurence Olivier is playing it on a repertory basis in London.

G. WASHINGTON'S birthday is being celebrated this afternoon with proper aplomb by the neighborhood houses which don't usually go in for matinee, including the Warner and Lust houses . . . Another neighborhood note of the week is today's and tomorrow's showing of "Louisiana Story," which the Circle considers something special and is plugging accordingly.

Schools Seek $3,065,156 In Arlington

A 1949-50 budget estimate totaling $3,065,156 and representing an increase of 38.7 per cent in the current output, was presented to Arlington County School Board yesterday.

The board, meanwhile, asked the county board for a $100,000 deficiency appropriation to cover needed improvement in school facilities.

Charles J. Walsh, acting superintendent of county schools, submitted the tentative budget. Expenditures this year are expected to total $2,217,000.

Some $827,156 of the proposed increase in the budget would have to come from local sources, it was disclosed. The State would be expected to contribute $21,000 more.

The increase would be mainly for an improved program for primary pupils, a raise in teacher pay, and facilities for an additional 1500 pupils.

A public hearing on the proposed budget will be held Wednesday at 8 p. m. in Thomas Jefferson Junior High School, the board announced last night.

Meeting at the James Monroe High School, the board asked for a $100,000 deficiency appropriation to cover the following:

Improvement in school lighting facilities found to be inadequate, especially in Washington-Lee High School, in a recent survey by the Virginia Electric Power Co., $75,000.

Improvement of water mains which are too small to carry the load to several schools, $15,000.

Replacement of plastered walls in 150 classrooms with regular slate chalk boards, $10,000.

It is expected that additional revenue to cover the request will be available to the county from the new tax on a"tos and business licenses passed this month by the county board.

A request by William C. Levy, attorney for the Provisional Committee for Separation of Church and School, for a public hearing on religious instructions in county schools, was denied.

Buckner Gets Delay

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—William P. Buckner, jr., 42-year-old cafe society figure, today was granted a one-week adjournment for pleading to charges he used a fashionable "chairty" benefit as the front for a Park ave. gambling fete.

Masons Paying Tribute to Washington

Members of local and national Masonic Lodges will make their annual pilgrimages today to the tomb of George Washington at Mount Vernon, the Washington Monument and the Masonic Memorial in Alexandria.

The advisory board of Masonic Clubs of the District will lay a wreath at the Monument at 10 a.m. Representative J. Percy Priest, (D., Tenn.), will speak at the exercises. The Rev. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church, will deliver the invocation and benediction.

John K. Collings, president of the National League of Masonic Clubs, will place the National League wreath at Washington's tomb at 2:30 p. m.

The Alexandria-Washington Lodge No. 22, (George Washington's own lodge,) will leave from the Masonic Memorial in Alexandria at 9 a. m. for Mount Vernon for a wreath-laying ceremony at the tomb. The lodge will hold its annual dinner at the Memorial at 7 p. m. with Senator Clyde R. Hoey, (D., N. C.), as speaker.

The George Washington National Memorial Association will hold its annual meeting at the Memorial at 10 a. m. to elect new officers. Following the business meeting and a luncheon at the Temple, members will go to Mount Vernon to place a memorial wreath at the tomb.

Lane Paroles 3 in Rocway Towers Raid

Three men sentenced to a year in the Maryland House of Correction as a result of a gambling raid on Rocway Towers last June 5 were among 23 persons granted paroles yesterday by Gov. William Preston Lane, jr.

The third group of Rocway Towers prisoners to be paroled, they are William Columbus Quade, 54, Cheltenham; Thomas H. Rice, 47, Silver Spring, and Frank Tolson, 48, Arlington, Va.

Two prisoners sentenced for murder also received paroles. They are John W. Purfer, 74, Baltimore, who killed his wife in 1920 and was sentenced to life imprisonment, and Salvador Cortez, 55, found guilty in Baltimore of slaying a tugboat cook.

Four Prince Georges County men got paroles. They are George H. Samuels, 28, sentenced to 18 months for manslaughter; Melvin Richardson, 50, larceny and illegal entry, two years; Julius Reed, 47, assault with intent to kill, two years, and Henry Walter Cager, 20, assault with intent to kill, two years.

MP Indicted In Arlington

An Arlington grand jury yesterday indicted Pfc. John M. Havens, 19, an Arlington Hall military policeman, for breaking into five county business places early this month.

His was one of 11 true bills returned by the grand jury yesterday. Havens, who pleaded innocent, was indicted on all five counts. His case was set for March 15.

He was arrested February 13 after residents near a radio store at 254 N. Glebe rd. telephoned police they heard the store window break. Havens was found inside by a five-man police squad that surrounded the store.

Also indicted was Victor Kelley, 58, of 1720 Wilson blvd., Arlington, accused of attempting to murder his wife, Mrs. Mary Kelley, 36, on January 25.

Police said Kelley tried to fire a loaded German pistol at his wife, but, being unfamiliar with it, was unable to fire it. Kelley is currently under mental observation at the State Hospital at Marion, Va.

The grand jury indicted Miss Janet Clemons, 20, of 605 Park ave., Falls Church, for felonious assault. The unmarried mother is accused of throwing her new-born baby out of a second story on December 19. Although injured, the child survived. Miss Clemons pleaded innocent.

Indicted for murder was William E. Warren, 33, of 1627 S. 13th st., Arlington, whom police say slew another man with a shotgun on February 5.

Four men were indicted for robbery in the theft of a taxicab on December 22 after beating up the driver.

They were Jack R. Neal, 23, of 544 N. Piedmont st.; William A. Kidwell, 22, of 2604 N. Military rd., and Leonard P. Graebner, 26, of 724 Lee blvd., all of Arlington, and Edward J. Rockwell, a fugitive whom police say they are extraditing to New York City.

Falls Church Street Plight Held Critical

It will take 5 years and "every penny of income" Falls Church now receives to get the city's strets and roads into "decent shape," the Falls Church City Council was told last night by one of its own members.

Councilman J. H. McCarthy, declaring that "for years we've been patching our streets and wasting money," charged the city's residents have been unwilling to vote a bond issue to pay for new and more permanent streets.

Councilman Samuel Dennis said $75,000 is being appropriated annually for streets, but that this "isn't enough to go around and do the job."

He described many Falls Church streets as unpaved, "dangerously narrow," rutted, and as having deep ditches along the sides.

The issue of city streets has been raised regularly in recent council meetings, including last night's, by citizens who complained about conditions.

Councilman Lee M. Rhoads said the council probably will have to get through its probable annexation proceedings against Fairfax County before it can consider a road improvement bond issue.

The city is considering a suit to annex roughly 7 square miles of Fairfax land.

Last night the council appointed John William Elbert, jr., 610 Knowland dr., to the City Planning Commission to replace Col. H. C. Person, who is resigning to leave the city.

D. C. Business Seen Tapering, But Still High

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington business generally will continue at a high level over the next six months, but will measure less than in the same period of boom 1948.

That was the consensus of four local trade leaders as stated yesterday at a panel forum of the Sales Executives Club of Washington in the Mayflower.

The adjustment, they opined, will not be of a serious character in the Capital with its steady Government payrolls but may be felt more acutely in other cities.

Summarized, here are the views of the panel participants:

NEAL: There is a definite tapering off trend in Washington. Building of new homes is lessening. New customers (for electricity) are running only two-thirds of those in early 1948. However, it is merely a lessening of the increase that business has enjoyed for so long a period. Revised forecasts warrant proceeding with caution.

BISSELLE: It is conceded that there has been a definite slowing down since late 1948, which has been gathering momentum since. The slide has not reached serious proportions, as production and income still remain at high levels. Last year was the best 12 months in banking history. Bank loans have been dipping since January 1, but not drastically. Bankers probably will be more selective on credit this year.

PARKER: The retail business is going to continue good for the next six months, but stores are going to have to do a better selling job. The public is more critical of stores' services and the attitude of their sales forces. The retailers' problem this year will be the disposal of goods, rather than the former difficulty of getting merchandise. Prices should continue lower.

HILLEGEIST: The period of wild speculation in the building field is over. We are not yet caught up with housing demand, but are on our way toward it. Mortgage interest rates are rising and down payments are higher. There will be more demand for second trusts. Building materials are now plentiful in most lines and labor shows signs of being willing to take lower pay. This city is just beginning to grow. Its business stability can't be equaled anywhere in the country.

INSURANCE: Washington sales of ordinary life insurance totaled $9,959,000 in January, off 14 per cent from the same 1948 month. Nationally, life insurance sales dropped 15 per cent in the month. Maryland and Virginia sales were off 20 per cent and 18 per cent, respectively.

LOCAL DIVIDENDS: Directors of Woodward & Lothrop declared regular quarterly dividends of $1.25 a share on preferred stock and 50 cents a share on common stock, both payable March 28 to stock of record March 9 . . . State Loan & Finance Corp. voted regular quarterly dividends 37½ cents a share on both types of cumulative preferred stock and 25 cents a share on Class A and B common stocks, all payable March 15 to stock of record March 1.

HOLIDAY: All securities and most commodity markets will suspend operations today in observance of Washington's Birthday. The Washington Stock Exchange, as well as local banks and building and loan associations also will be closed.

ODD LOTS: Steel industry operations this week are calculated at 100.3 per cent of capacity, against 10 per cent last week . . . J. Walter Thompson agency led in total advertising billed in 1948 with 115 million dollars, an increase of 12 million over 1947. Young & Rubican was second second with 75 million . . . Kaiser-Frazer Corp. will increase its dealers' discounts about 6 per cent, effective April 1 . . . Tank car price of pure ethyl alcohol dropped 2 cents yesterday to 23 cents a gallon.

FURNITURE: Retail sales of furniture in Washington showed a gain of 3 per cent in January over the same 1948 month, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond. For the entire year, furniture sales increased 5 per cent over the previous 12 months. The figures, reported by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, are based on sales of six leading furniture stores here.

EARNINGS: The Sun Oil Co. reported record net income of $42,853,839, or $8.61 a common share for 1948, compared with $24,339,913, or $5.28 a share in 1947. Other earnings statements:

Quick Kayoes Open World Tourney at Ft. Myer

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

DURING THE WAR, Sergt. Joe Louis doubled as a swami for an inquisitive reporter and peered into his private crystal ball to ascertain the size, shape, age and color of the man who would succeed him as heavyweight champion of the world.

"He's about 18 years old. He's in the Army somewhere, or maybe the Navy. He'll grow up to about 190 or 195 pounds, and he's at least 6 feet tall. He's either white or colored. Can't tell about that." That was the gist of Louis' findings.

POVICH

Six years later, the fellow hasn't put in an appearance as yet. Louis is still the champion, and even at 34 and admittedly slowed up, he's suffering from a lack of worthy challengers.

Louis had plenty of company in his assumption that the armed services would disgorge a regiment of young fighters who would take over the titles in most of the weight classes. It was the popular belief, and a sadly mistaken one. Look at the champs of today. Louis, Freddie Mills, Marcel Cerdan, Ray Robinson, Ike Williams, Willie Pep—all of them of prewar vintage.

THEN where are the good fighters who were supposed to come out of the armed forces? The Army thinks it has the answer, and submits it bluntly: They're still in the Army. And a lot of them are fighting this week, the whole solid week, in the world-wide Army boxing tournament at Fort Myer.

At Fort Myer, they've been brought in from Japan, from Germany, from Austria, Guam, Okinawa and Saipan to settle it with their fists—who's the best man at his weight in the whole Army. The men who made it to Washington battled their way through company, battalion, regiment, division and theatre-command ranks to get this shot at the titles.

Out of this group may eventually emerge the boys who will turn pro and go on to the titles they were supposed to have won in pro ranks by this time. One of the Army's bigger jobs has been to keep professional managers out of their soldiers' hair. A special committee has been appointed to shoo the pros away from the likely looking lads during the tournament.

ALREADY pestered with offers to turn pro is Andy Nathan, the colored boy who will represent the Military District of Washington, in the welterweight division. Professional managers are drooling at the prospect of getting Nathan's name on a contract when his hitch in the Army expires in May. And small wonder they've been attracted to him.

To win his way to the local area title and qualify for the tournament, Nathan won four fights in an elapsed time of less than nine minutes. The man he met in the finals lasted longer against Nathan than any other. His feat was staying the entire first round. He couldn't answer the bell for the second. Nathan obviously is a puncher.

The big noise among the heavyweights is 238-pound Howard Williams, brought from Japan to represent the Far East Command. He won 28 of his 30 bouts in the service by knockouts. He admits to being 30, and is probably older, the Satchel Paige of the tournament, but his punching power hasn't been lost on the fight racket guys who want him under contract.

IF PRECEDENT were followed, the Navy, not the Army, would be the source of the future fight champions. There is no record of the Army ever having developed a world champion, but the Navy and Marines have many proud boasts: Tom Sharkey, Jack Sharkey, Gene Tunney, Johnny Buff and George La Blanche. The latter is the Marine who jumped ship one night in San Francisco and knocked out the Nonpareil Jack Dempsey, the best of the 150 pounders in the nineties.

Johnny Buff's was an especially notable case. He didn't get out of the Navy until after his third hitch, never fought a pro fight until he was 29. But he outpointed Pete Herman at the Garden in 1921 for the bantamweight championship of the world.

The Army is bearing down on boxing now, though. It's wartime tournaments were excusably haphazard. These peace-time elimination fights are the real thing. They'll establish the eight best fighters in the Army and they'll own no mean titles.

Bobsledder Critically Hurt; Swiss Win Title

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 21 (U.P.).—A daredevil Swiss team of Driver Felix Endrich and Brakeman Friedrich Waller won the world two-man bobsled championship today while two French sledders were injured, one critically, in a crackup on the treacheous Shady Curve of the Mount Van Hoevenberg run.

The U. S. No. 1 team of Fred Fortune of Lake Placid and Jack McDonald of Saranac Lake finished third and the No. 2 American team of Tuffy Latour and Leo Martin, both of Saranac Lake, was fourth behind the two Swiss two-man entries.

Switzerland's No. 2 sled was second

French Brakeman Henri Adan was taken to Lake Placid Hospital suffering from a fracture in the region of the left temple and a possible broken leg, and Driver Louis Saint Calbre sustained less serious injuries when their sled cracked up at almost the exact spot where Belgian Driver Max Houben was killed February 10.

It was the third accident on the Mount Hoevenberg run since the course was opened on February 5. Jacques Mouvert, Belgian brakeman, who was injured in the accident that proved fatal to Houben, was hurt in a practice run two days before.

Hospital authorities reported that Adan, 31, was hemorrhaging from the ears when he arrived unconscious at the hospital and was placed on the critical list. Saint Calbre, 35, suffered only a slight concussion and multiple bruises and abrasions about the head.

Saint Calbre said that the French sled, making its second of four scheduled runs down the course, came out of Shady Curve too soon, hit the retaining wall on the opposite side of the curve, and threw both sledders forward into the icy run.

The injuries to Adan and Saint Calbre forced the French to withdraw from the world four-man championships scheduled for tomorrow. That left only two United States sleds and one Swiss team to race for the title.

ON FLAT OF BACK—William H. Smith, 118, Fifth Army, is about as flat on his back as a man can get in last night's World championships of the Army at Fort Myer. Referee Eddie LaFond kneels down and yells the count to Smith. But Smith, a Huntington, N. Y. boy, was out for 10 or more. Lino Gatica, Austin, Texas, from the Pacific Command, was the winner

Third Army Takes Lead, Wins Four Of 7 Bouts

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

To the clash of cymbals and the rumble of drums, the Army's first global boxing tournament of champions began last night before 5,500 spectators in the converted Fort Myer Riding Hall.

Appropriately, it was the Third Army of the late General Patton, a lightning hitter in Germany, which swept into first place in the team competition with four victories in seven bouts.

Marshall Clayton, New Orleans lightweight with the punch of a heavy, got the ball rolling for the leaders in the fourth bout of the evening.

He shuffled around Bob Bolden, a Cherry Hill, Md., lad for a minute and a half, and then suddenly lashed out with a terrific left to the cheek. Bolden flew back into the ropes, and pitched forward to the canvas. He barely beat the "10" count in getting up.

Clayton didn't wait for his supply line to catch up with him, he pursued his advantage with a roundhouse right which beat Bolden to the floor, and Referee Eddie LaFond stopped the bout at 2:22 of the first round.

Nod for Pillen

Lee Pillen, a Michigander with a snappy pair of hands, beat out a unanimous decision on Dave Stowe, a husky Sixth Army welterweight, to gain the Third's second victory.

It took a Washingtonian, Larry (The Kid) Jones of 442 6½ st. sw., to noteh the Third's next victory, and he did so decisively against a home town rival, Tommy Harrison, 3013 Sherman ave.

Harrison had a two-inch advantage in reach, but the weary Jones succeeded in brushing inside, and beating Tommy to the punch. The Kid won every round with a stiff left jab and a choppy right. He had Harrison in trouble in the last round with a right hook which sent Tommy's head through the ropes, but the bout went the distance.

Sid Peele, a balding Fayetteville (N. C.) Tarheel, belted the tar out of a California heavyweight, Willie Collins, in the bout which brought an end to the program.

Collins Down Fast

A mere private, Peele immediately earned the respect of Collins, a PFC, with a left to the heart which sent his foe to his haunches in the first minute. Collins arose at two, and danced away from Peele until 30 seconds before the end of the round.

Then he ran into a right to the jaw, and took a nine count before the bell saved him.

Art Llanos carried a string of 77 straight victories into Turner's Arena last night and Jimmy Cooper ended it with a 10-round decision.

Cooper had Llanos on the canvas in the first round and again in the third.

Llanos closed fast in the late rounds but Cooper rallied in the final to gain the unanimous nod. The fight was one of the best seen locally this year and was warmly cheered by the crowd. Cooper opened a cut over Llanos' eye in the fourth and kept jabbing it open the rest of the way.

Cooper's jab and right cross scored repeatedly on the tough Llanos and it was this right cross that had the Puerto Rican on the canvas both times. Llanos was toughest in the sixth and seventh rounds but couldn't take advantage of Cooper's trouble.

A crowd of 901 people saw the bouts and paid a gross of $1,983.18.

In the semiwindup, the heavier boys, both Washingtonians, slugged it out for the full five rounds with Johnny Holt ahead all the way to gain the decision. Holt had Harvey Jones on the canvas in the third round with a right-hand smash.

Roy Wirt, 147, of Roanoke, Va., gained the nod over Billy Cofield, 143, of Baltimore in five rounds in what probably was the best of the prelims. Wirt floored Cofield in the third.

Puggy King, 124, of Washington won a unanimous decision over Jackie O'Keefe, 130, of Providence, R. I., in a four-rounder. Scott Richardson, 160, decisioned Dick Barber, 160½, in the first of four-round, and Little Dynamite, 127½, was awarded a TKO over Kid Cecil, 124, after 2:55 of the third round.

Catholic U. Loses, 64-50

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 21.—Loyola College registered its tenth Mason-Dixon Basketball Conference victory by downing Catholic U., 64 to 50 here tonight. The Greyhounds now hold a 10-and-1 record.

Jim Lacy, star Loyola forward, playing his last home game, topped both teams with seven field goals and seven of eight fouls for 21 points. Lacy thrilled the crowd by tossing in a basket from midcourt just as the game ended but the referee ruled the final buzzer had beaten the ball.

Catholic U. played possession ball and kept close to the Greyhounds throughout the contest. Although the District team could not get on top, the visitors were a threat until the final five minutes.

Indians Sign Luke Easter of Homestead Grays

Outfielder Luke Easter, who found himself without a summertime baseball job when the Washington Homestead Grays disbanded last November, yesterday hooked up with a new employer.

The giant 26-year-old Cincinnatian was plucked off the Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, team by the Cleveland Indians, assigned to their San Diego, Pacific Coast League farm.

Easter had just finished hitting safely in nine straight times at bat and clinched the Puerto Rican Winter League batting championship with a .402 average when the Indians signed him.

Schoolboy Golf Plans in Making

Frank Emmet, head of the scholastic golf association, is now preparing the spring golf schedule for metropolitan high and prep schools.

DeMatha and Washington and Lee have been added to the league for the first time this spring. They will join last year's league, which was composed of Georgetown Prep, Blair, Bethesda-Chevy Chase, Gonzaga, Devitt, George Washington, and St. Johns.

Any other interested schools are urged to contact Frank Emmet at Wisconsin 3847 before Friday.

MacPhail Loses His Club Manager And Fist Fight, Too

Naples, Fla., Feb. 21 (AP).—Richard S. Butler has resigned as manager of a beach club operated by Larry MacPhail, one-time stormy petrel of baseball, as the result of an altercation in which blows were struck but neither man was hurt.

Butler said MacPhail called him "a fighting name" February 12, and he hit MacPhail.

Then, Butler narrated, MacPhail went outside and returned to the club with a "No Parking" sign, ready to resume the fracas.

Others soon separated the scuffling pair.

MacPhail, former head of the New York Yankee Baseball Club, declined comment.

Kentucky Still Far Out Front

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—The Kentucky Wildcats head down the homestretch of the college basketball season virtually assured of No. 1 ranking in the Associated Press poll of sportscasters and sports writers.

The experts almost made it unanimous for the Wildcats, winners of 22 and losers of 1, by giving them 55 of their 66 first-place votes today. The others were well divided among runnerup St. Louis, Oklahoma Aggies, Illinois, Butler, Bradley and Wyoming.

St. Louis amassed 548 points to 647 for Kentucky, with the Aggies a close up third with 479. St. Louis plays the Aggies Saturday in a game that should decide the No. 2 team.

The top teams figured on a point basis of 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 (first place votes and won-lost records through February 12 in parentheses):

1.	Kentucky (55)	647
2.	St. Louis (4) (18-2)	548
3.	Oklahoma A. & M. (2) (17-3)	479
4.	Illinois (1) (16-2)	417
5.	Minnesota (16-2)	250
6.	Tulane (20-3)	247
7.	Western Kentucky (22-3)	214
8.	San Francisco (20-5)	135
9.	Bowling Green (18-6)	96
10.	Bradley (2) (23-4)	90
11.	Butler (1) (17-3)	60
12.	Loyola (Chicago) (18-4)	61
13.	Yale (18-6)	54
14.	Wyoming (1) (22-6)	53
15.	Hamline (19-3)	48
16.	Utah (20-6)	44
17.	Duquesne (15-4)	32
18.	Ohio State (11-6)	23
19.	Southern California (12-8)	19
20.	Texas (16-5)	14

Others receiving votes: North Carolina State, 13; City College of New York, Villanova, each 10; UCLA, 8; Stanford, 7; La Salle, Nebraska, each 6; DePaul, Michigan, each 5; Oklahoma, 4; Tennessee, Eastern Kentucky, Oregon State, each 3; Cincinnati, Denver, Arkansas, Notre Dame, each 2; Holy Cross, Baylor, Louisville and Washington State, each 1.

Groza Sets Mark As Wildcats Win

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 21 (AP).—Big Alex Groza scored 38 points tonight to shatter the Southern Conference basketball scoring record and lead Kentucky to an easy 95-40 victory over Georgia.

Marines Win, 69-43

The Quantico Marines last night waltzed to a 69-43 victory over Andrews Field on the winners' court. Jack Robbins paced the Marines with 20 points for their thirty-fourth victory against eight losses.

GW High Beats Out Episcopal For 2d State Track Crown

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 21 (AP).—George Washington High School, of Alexandria, extended its track supremacy over the Virginia High School League Group I field today by winning its second consecutive State indoor championship with 22 points.

Episcopal High School of Alexandria finished with the next highest total of 16 2/5 points to head the prep division as three new indoor records were established and two others were equaled.

Bunched behind George Washington were Washington-Lee of Arlington, with 16 1/5; Maury High School of Norfolk and Thomas Jefferson of Richmond, both scoring 15 points; Newport News High School, 14½ points.

Fork Union Military Academy showed surprising strength, taking second prep honors with 8½ points and leaving only 3½ for Woodberry Forest.

Bobby Jones, George Washington's national interscholastic indoor mile champion, came through as expected, winning both the 880 and the mile.

The smooth-running Jones lowered the State indoor mile record to 4:49.7, and was nine-tenths of a second over the record he set last year for the half-mile.

The meet's high-point makers, though, were Episcopal's Jon Dilweg and Maury's Greshman Hutchins, both scoring 11 points.

The brilliant Episcopal athlete, son of Laverne Dilweg, former Marquette University football star, equaled the record of 6.7 in winning the 50-yard high hurdles. He placed second in the low hurdles and the high jump.

Hutchins dashed over the low hurdle course in fast time, won second in the high hurdles and the 50-yard dash.

Billy Duke, Fork Union's fine little all-round athlete from Norfolk, cracked the pole vault standard with a leap of 11 feet, 7 inches. Duke also placed in the low hurdles and the sprint.

Summaries:

POLE VAULT—Won by W. Duke (FUMA); second, R. Wood (N. N.); third, R. Poston (E. H. S.). Distance, 11 feet 7 inches.

HIGH JUMP—Won by D. Mitchell (N. N.); second, J. Dilwig (E. H. S.); third, C. Hall (W.-L.). Height, 6 feet.

Clemson Routs Terps, 68-49

Clemson, S. C., Feb. 21.—Clemson University avenged an earlier loss to the University of Maryland here tonight, coming from behind at the half to tack a 68-49 beating on the Terrapins as they sought to clinch a berth in the Southern Conference tournament next month.

Maryland, winner by 74-50 in a game on its home court, held tonight's host safety for the first half, even boasted a 30-27 edge at halftime. From then on, however, it was all Clemson with the Tigers winning almost as they pleased.

While Lee Brawley was pacing the Terps with 12 points, three Tigers improved on that performance. Guard John Snee was tops with 16, but right behind were Doug Haugk with 15 and June Pruitt with 14.

Special Match at Penn Alleys Will Aid Boys Club Campaign

By way of stimulating further interest in The Washington Post's Third Annual Bowling Tournament for the benefit of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, the Civil Areonautics League, operating out of the Penn Bowling Recreation Center, will stage a special five-game match next Saturday, starting at 7:30 p. m.

This league already has given its all-out support, and all proceeds will go into The Washington Post tournament fund, Manager Lou Kramer announced.

Competing teams will be Civil Aeronautics Authority and Civil Aeronautics Auditors.

The tournament, which is being staged with the cooperation of the Metropolitan Washington Duckpin Operators' Association, started the second week with more than 5000 entries. The event ends on March 1.

Not many of the alleys are staging league games tonight owing to George Washington's birthday, but those who are operating are aiming for big participation from the men and women's duckpinners.

Entry fee is 50 cents, one half of which goes to the Police Boys Club and the other half to the prize fund. Prince Georges and Arlington County alleys will be benefiting the boys' recreational groups of that sector.

The Washington Post again calls attention to the fact that there is a special class for Ten Pin bowlers.

Scores at Mount Rainier, managed by Ollie Pacini, have been good. Thomas N.Hughes, with a 393-72—465, has topped the competitors. Eurgene Corrado, also of the same loop, is next with 343-105—448.

Over at Takoma Alberta Friedman, of the Mixed Foursome League, tallied 352-72—412 to lead the feminine bowlers there. Gerald Danauskas proved the latest of the top scorers at Takoma with a 373-78—451 in the Takoma Men's League.

Scratch for men is 128, for women 118. Full handicaps prevail.

Green Hornet Presses Tarzan in One-Fall Win

The Green Hornet last night defeated "Tarzan" Frank Hewitt in 13 minutes with a body press in the feature, one-fall finish wrestling bout at U$line Arena.

In the other matches, Azo Tako defeated Joe Ludlum; Lew Laird defeated Fritz Wallach, and Arnold Skaaland and Art Brady defeated Jim Wallis and Angelo Savoldi in the Australian tag team match.

GW High Wins No. 19, 81-26

George Washington High basketball forces of Alexandria, Va., kept their undefeated record intact last night at the home court as they rang up No. 19 in a row with an 81-26 romp over Fairfax High.

The Presidents' first team played only half the game, running up a 47-7 halftime score before going to the showers. Tony Daukas led the winners' scoring with 24 points.

Cards' Kurowski Is Happy His Salary Cut Was So Small

St. Louis, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Third Baseman George Kurowski admitted today that the St. Louis Cardinals had cut his pay but he wasn't bitter about it—just surprised that the slash wasn't bigger. Kurowski said "sure I got cut, but the terms of the contract were more generous than I had expected."

He had an elbow operation during the winter and said he expected to be in excellent physical condition when he reports to the Cardinals training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., March 1.

Kurowski, a native of Reading Pa., has had intermittent arm trouble through his career. His right throwing arm is several inches shorter than his left arm because of a truck accident when he was a boy. Last season he played in only 77 games and hit but .214, far below his usual standard.

Other Cards who signed included Pitchers Ted Wilks, the relief ace, and big Jim Hearn, and outfielder Ron Northey. A total of 33 players have signed their contracts and only six more are yet to get on the line.

Ted Wants To Lead in Everything

EVERGLADES, Fla., Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox, lolling in a sunbaked hamlet 85 miles from Miami, took time out from his fishing today to report that he is "shooting for a .400 batting average this season."

The 30-year-old outfielder, the American League's batting leader last season, admitted the .400 mark will be "a tough nut to crack."

"Batting .400 isn't easy as going out there and hooking some fish," he said, gesturing toward the Gulf of Mexico.

"Sure, I hit .400 seven years ago, but before that the last player was Harry Heilman about 20 years ago. Look at Stan Musial. He can do anything with a bat and he's never hit .400."

Gangling Ted has some other aspirations for the 1949 campaign, too.

"Frankly," he grinned, "I'd like to lead the league in everything. I hit 25 homers last year but I'm sure I'll hit more this year."

"I'VE NEVER felt so good in my life. I feel like I could go out there and hit a few right now," he asserted, swinging at an imaginary baseball.

"These Everglades are right down my alley. I get in all the fishing I want and there's nobody here to bother me. There isn't more than 250 people in this town and that suits me fine. No cars, no busses, no noise. It's a pleasure to be away from that rat-race in cities."

Williams, who received a reported $80,000 last year, said he had been given a "nice raise," but had not signed his contract yet.

"There are a few things I have to straighten out and I guess I'll sign in Sarasota within the next few weeks."

Third Army Takes Lead

started the show by rallying in the last round to outpoint George Davis of the European Command.

In his corner before the bout, Davis' handlers read him a telegram of encouragement from Gen. Lucius Clay in Berlin. For two rounds, the Jersey flyweight responded with a splendid boxing exhibition.

He ran circles around the hard hitting Lopez, and the crowd cheered as he darted in with an occasional left, and stepped back away, clicking his heels. However, in the last session, Lopez caught on and gave Davis a merciless two-fisted pummeling.

Lino Gatica, a Fourth Army standard bearer from Texas, scored a genuine one punch victory in the second bout of the night. After jabbing his bantam foe, Bill Smith, for a round and a half, he suddenly struck with a solid right to the jaw, and Smith was out cold on his back.

In the featherweight battle of Minnesotians, Don Dakota of white earth, won the first and third rounds, and gained the nod over Lloyd Livingston of Hayward. It was a Sixth Army triumph over the First Army.

The tournament continues tonight at 8 o'clock with nine bouts. Finals are set for Saturday night.

Summaries:

FLYWEIGHTS—Nicholas Lopez (Pacific) decisioned George Dave (European).

FEATHERWEIGHTS—Don Dakota (Sixth Army) decisioned Lloyd Livingston (First Army).

LIGHTWEIGHTS—Marshall Clayton, jr. (Third Army) TKO'd Robert Bolden (Far East) in 2:22 of first round.

Welterweights—Ireland Pillen (Third Army) decisioned David Stowe (Sixth Army).

Middleweights — Lawrence Jones (Third Army) decisioned George Harrison (Far East).

Heavyweights—Sidney Peele (Third Army) kayoed Willie Collins (Sixth Army) in 1:06 of second round.

Duckpin Event Tonight Helps Heart Campaign

The Washington Heart Campaign will be the beneficiary of the First Annual George Washington Handicap Duckpin Tournament, to be held tonight at the Hi-Skor lanes.

Competition will run from noon till past midnight.

The tourney, open to both men and women, is a five-game event, with three-fifths handicap on 128 scratch. Entry fee for this worthy competition is four bucks. Fifty cents of each entry goes to the Heart Fund.

A first prize of $100 is the big plum in this National Duckpin Bowling Congress sanctioned tournament.

Jacob's Shot Wins

With the score tied 30-30 and only 15 seconds left to play, Jerry Jacob of Landon's Jayvees intercepted a St. Alban's pass and scored to win for Landon, 32-30, yesterday on the loser's court.

Colt, Wilson Tiff Starts Tournament

Four Interhigh basketball teams, survivors of elimination games, tonight open the championship playoffs in a semifinals doubleheader at the National Guard Armory, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

In the first game at 7:30, Wilson, which finished the regular season in first place, faces fourth-place Coolidge. In the nightcap, Eastern and defending champion Central tied for second, are paired.

Wilson and Central are the big favorites to move on to the finals Saturday afternoon at the Armory. They whipped their foes of tonight in contests earlier in the season.

Dyer Gets Job

Drawing card of the round robin is Central's Jimmy Pantes, who's being ranked with Interhigh's all-time basketball greats. He finished second in the league scoring race with 142 points in nine games, and has almost single-handedly spearheaded his team into the playoffs with his playmaking.

Blond-haired 5 foot, 7 inch Fanny Dyer will probably get Eastern's guarding assignment against Pantos. In their meeting three weeks ago, Pantos caught Dyer cold, and scored four baskets in the first three minutes. But after that initial spurt, Jimmy had trouble getting away.

In winning eight out of nine league games, Wilson showed great balance and depth. Leo Speros, Don Scott, and Jim Young, playing their first seasons as regulars, are the Tiger shotmakers, who'll give Coolidge most of its troubles.

Coolidge has a few sharpshooters itself in Don Eslin, Kenny Luxenberg and Jim Hollowell, but will have to overcome its lack of a big, strong man to control the backboards.—HERB HEFT.

Yankees Trail In Badminton

Glasgow, Scotland, Feb. 21 (AP).—Malaya took a 3-1 lead over the United States today in the first half of the semifinals of the Thomas Cup badminton matches.

The Malaya players won two doubles matches and one singles while Dave Freeman, captain of the United States' squad, scored the lone American triumph.

Five more matches are scheduled for tomorrow night, three singles and two doubles.

Chan Kon Leong and Yeoh Tech Chye, both of Selangor, defeated Bob Williams, Buffalo, N. Y., and Clint Stephens, Baltimore, 15-7 and 15-12, in the first doubles.

Ooi Teik Hock and Teoh Seng Khoon turned back Freeman and Wynne Rogers, Arcadia, Calif., 15-8, 7-15 and 15-8, in the other doubles.

Wong Peng Soon of Singapore defeated Martin Mendez, San Diego, Calif., 15-11, 11-15, 15-10, in the first singles match. Freeman then utilized high services and smashing drives to defeat Hock, 15-10, 10-15 and 15-4.

Catholic Joins Boxing Group

An invitation to compete in the Intercollegiate Boxing Association, starting with this year's championship tournament, yesterday was accepted by Catholic University.

The Cardinals, it was announced, will replace the Coast Guard Academy in a six-team association consisting of West Point, Virginia, Western Maryland, Syracuse and Penn State.

This year's tourney will be held March 11-12 at College Station, Pa., home of Penn State. It will be the twenty-sixth annual get-together of the league.

Catholic, unbeaten in three matches so far, still has bouts with Army, Maryland, John Carroll, Virginia and Miami on its schedule. The Army engagement is set for Saturday at West Point.

Navy Tourney Starts Today

Quantico, Va., Feb. 21.—Two of the top three Navy teams of the southeastern shore stations will go into action here tomorrow afternoon for the Group 6 All-Navy basketball championship.

A sailor team, representing the naval station at Annapolis and the Severn River naval command titleholders, will face the Norfolk naval base quintet, outstanding Navy five of that area, in the Marine gym at 1:30.

The Quantico Marines, defending All-Navy champions and the third team in the tournament, drew a bye in the drawing held yesterday, and will take on the Annapolis team Wednesday night at 8 p. m. and the Norfolk five on Thursday.

Hoover Hiring Plan Operating in Most Agencies Since 1942

[Editor's note: The second of a series on the Federal personnel recommendations of the Hoover Commission.]

The Hoover hiring plan isn't nearly as revolutionary as it appears to be on the surface.

In reality, it has been in operation in most Federal agencies since March 15, 1942. Since that date the vast majority of the people hired by Uncle Sam have been recruited and selected by the agencies, subject to standards fixed and enforced by Civil Service.

So, what the Hoover Commission actually has done is to adopt as its own a practice already common in Government, and urge its extension to cover most other jobs and agencies.

Everyone realizes, of course, that during the war the regular Civil Service hiring procedures were abandoned, and the agencies themselves did most of their own recruiting and hiring. A staggering total of 2,697,124 were hired in 1943 alone. The war would have been lost if Civil Service had insisted on taking months and years to examine all of those people.

The war is over, and two years ago Civil Service announced it would return to a peacetime hiring system. Fortunately, it didn't try to turn the clock back to those slow and easy days of the 1930s. The make-up of Government had changed drastically, and Uncle Sam was faced with hiring upward of half a million people each year merely to fill vacancies.

Civil Service was the first to admit that it couldn't hire that enormous number under its slow-moving prewar operation. The President realized it, too. That's why he ordered Civil Service to decentralize many of its recruiting, examining and hiring functions to the individual agencies.

As a result, decentralization today is a fact and it's working; it's no longer a debatable theory as apparently some people assume it is. These are the impressive facts:

In operation today are more than 700 agency boards of examiners which are a direct arm of the Civil Service Commission with the delegated power to recruit, examine, and certify applicants within their restricted areas; and,

About 125 committees of expert examiners are functioning to recruit people for scientific, technical and professional jobs.

In 1947, 55.4 per cent of all exams were conducted by these various boards, and 31 per cent of the placements were made by them. Last year 60-odd per cent of all placements in the "field service, where 90 per cent of the Federal workers are located, were made by the boards. These boards operate under standards laid down by the Civil Service Commission, and the commission inspects the work of the boards to make sure they remain in line.

In addition, about 20 per cent of the placements made last year were for temporary jobs—and here again the agencies did their own hiring, subject to Civil Service rules.

Therefore, it's idle to say that the Hoover hiring plan won't work. It not only has worked, but it is working in actual practice. To repeat, the Hoover Commission would merely extend the hiring methods that have been in operation since 1942, and even longer, for some agencies. Civil Service, however, would continue to recruit and examine employes common to all agencies, such as clerks, typists, stenographers, guards, etc.

Officials in agencies like the Tennessee Valley Corporation, FBI, Foreign Service and the Federal Reserve Board also will indorse the general principles of the Hoover plan. They know it will work, because they have been operating under its general outline for years, and now the Atomic Energy Commission has started down the same path. These agencies have set their own standards for applicants, and they are high and tough.

Each of the above is usually conceded to be in the "prestige" list of Federal agencies—agencies where people would like to get jobs; agencies that have a good reputation as places to work, and agencies that are accepted and generally admired by John Q. Public.

These five agencies are exempt by law from Civil Service. They are doing their recruiting and testing. The TVA system is so good, in fact, that the Hoover Commission would use it as a model throughout Government.

Admittedly, these agency hiring plans have worked well because tough and able men like J. Edgar Hoover and David Lilienthal were the heads of the FBI and TVA, respectively.

The real potential weakness of the decentralized hiring plan lies in weak and spineless administrators. If Uncle Sam had enough Hoovers and Lilienthals for every agency there would be no problem. In that case, Civil Service wouldn't even need a large inspection staff to check on the agencies, because men of that caliber don't resort to shenanigans.

So the answer to the Government's personnel problems—like so many of its other troubles—can be solved by the appointments of able and hard-hitting administrators.

1.6 Million Price For Nevius Tract Upheld by Court

Alexandria Jury's Award of $1.45 Per Foot for Hospital Site Is Sustained

Richmond, Va. Feb. 21 (AP). An award of $1,600,000 for the Nevius tract across the Potomac from Washington—site for a Veterans Administration hospital—was upheld by the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals here today.

An Alexandria District Court jury had awarded $1.45 per square foot for the 25-acre tract in Arlington County, Va. This was approximately double the value fixed by the Government and about one-third the value asked by the owners.

The United States had deposited $850,827 in June, 1945, for the property. It appealed the $1,600,000 award which Judge Sterling Hutcheson of the District Court granted on the basis of the jury verdict.

The property was obtained by the Government from a group of associates headed by Avon M. Nevius, retired Washington banker. Long sought by the Veterans' Administration, its acquisition was at various times opposed by the House Appropriations Committee, Senator Byrd and Representative Smith of Virginia, and the Arlington County Board.

Last January 10, President Truman recommended to Congress that the proposed hospital be reduced in capacity from 750 beds to 500.

Jury Judgment Praised

In an opinion written by Chief Judge John J. Parker, the Appeals Court said today:

"The Government has sought to have the property valued on the basis of the valuations of other property in its neighborhood without reference to its manifest suitability for a high-class, multistory apartment project.

"The property owners have sought to recover a valuation based upon the capitulation of nonexistent apartments.

"The jury, under the wise and correct guidance of the able trial judge, has avoided the pitfalls inherent in both extremes."

Advantages Set Forth

"It lies just across the Potomac from Washington, is well shaped, has an elevation of from 50 to 100 feet, is on the axis of the Mall, in line with the Capitol, Washington Monument, and Lincoln Memorial, and commands a splendid view of the most beautiful part of the city.

"It is within a few minutes drive of the business section, the Government offices, the railway station and the airfield. It is large enough to permit the creation of a high-class neighborhood with eight elevator apartments, and apartment hotel, stores, shops, garages, etc; and the evidence is to the effect that it is the only tract available within a reasonable distance of the center of Washington for a development of this sort."

Accuser Absent, Assault Charges Are Dismissed

Two District men charged with assaulting and threatening a Landover Hills (Md.) housewife were cleared yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court when the woman failed to appear.

The charges were made by Mrs. Levina Schildknecht, 4102 72d ave., Landover Hills, who swore out an assault warrant against John Peay, 25, 1404 Maryland ave. ne., alleging he struck and knocked her down during an argument at her home Friday afternoon.

She also swore out a peace bond warrant against Arthur Brommer, 1725 Kilbourne pl. nw., for allegedly brandishing a pistol and threatening her.

Boy Charged With $600 Mail Theft

A 16-year-old boy was turned over to juvenile authorities yesterday after police said he admitted taking more than $600 in two weeks from subscribed addressed to a publishing company which employed him as a messenger.

The boy, a former Central High School student, was arrested Saturday on the complaint of Arward Williams, of 8602 Garfield st., Bethesda, that his wallet containing $81 in cash, had been taken from a dressing room in the National Arena skating rink, 17th st. and Kalorama rd. nw.

Police said when they searched the boy, they found the $81 in his pocket together with an additional 600, part of it in hundred-dollar bills.

Police reported the boy said that as a messenger for the Army Times Publishing Co., 1115 18th st. nw., he picked up the company's mail at the Connecticut ave. postoffice station, and removed money.

Police said there was no way of determining how much money he actually took. The company, which publishes the Army Times and related publications, will not be able to determine how many subscription orders were destroyed until they hear from those who sent them, they said. The boy was charged with four counts of grand larceny.

While in custody, the youth led police to arrest another juvenile, who was charged with theft of a bicycle.

Sunday afternoon, while in a police cruiser, the boy pointed to a bicycle on the pavement, and shouted: "That's my bike that was stolen."

Police stopped and questioned a teen-age boy, who finally admitted he had stolen the bicycle last November, the police said. He also was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Gaylor Run Project Sought By Alexandria

The city of Alexandria will ask the Federal Government to turn over to it the Gaylor Run housing project, a veterans' development built by the Government in 1946 in the western part of the city.

Councilman Leroy S. Bendheim told the council that the 86-unit project, built of one story Army barracks, is in "a rather deplorable state." But the contract between the city and the Government does not clearly indicate he said, which of the two should make the needed improvements.

Residents of the project have asked that the grounds be graded and seeded and that drainage facilities be installed to carry off water which settles in back yards and floods some of the units. Bendheim added that considerable repair is needed on the buildings themselves.

The Government gets about $27,000 a year in rent from the development, according to Bendheim, and pays the city $4000 a year in lieu of taxes. If the city could take it over, he said, it could put back considerable amounts of money in improvements.

The council agreed to ask Representative Howard W. Smith and Virginia's two Senators to use their efforts to have the project turned over to the city.

In other actions last night the council commended the city police department in general and Inspector Russell A. Hawes, Sergt. Francis N. Johnson and Detective Thomas E. Woods, in particular, for the solution last week of the September 11, 1948, murder of Police Officer Robert B. Harris.

3 Plead Guilty In Taxidriver's Assault-Robbery

Two Fort Myer privates and a former soldier pleaded guilty in Montgomery Circuit Court yesterday to the assault-robbery of a District cab driver near Forest Glen, Md., last July 30.

Terming the assault "the most outrageous crime to occur here in years, Judge Stedman Prescott deferred imposition of sentence on Pvts. John McCabe, 18, and Michael Vurchio, 19, both of Fort Myer, and Arthur Zamoro, 19, of Los Angeles, Cal., pending further investigation. Because of the nature of the crime, however, he warned the three not to expect suspended sentences.

The men are accused of robbing Louis S. Grasso, 1274 Meigs pl. nw., who testified he drove them from downtown Washington to a secluded spot near Forest Glen, where he was beaten so viciously he suffered concussion of the brain and several broken ribs. After the assault, Grasso said, the men robbed him of his cab and two dollars, and left him semi-conscious.

Young Navy Petty Officer Wins Custody Of His Motherless Boy From Grandmother

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

Bobby Sempek stands between his grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Buckley and his father, Gunners Mate A. T. Sempek

Mrs. Margaret Buckley, 57, was ordered yesterday to turn over her 2-year-old motherless grandson to his father after a District Court custody fight.

The order was given by Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut who found that the father, Navy Gunners Mate Alex T. Sempek, 24, is well able to make a proper home for the boy, Robert Allen Sempek.

According to Sempek, he learned only last month that his estranged wife, Dorothy, had died in Gallinger Hospital in September of tuberculosis.

He testified that he quickly remarried "to give my boy a home." And, he said, he came to Washington to get the son. He admitted that he had only seen the child for one month since birth.

He said on Thursday when he entered Mrs. Buckley's home at 2248 Shannon pl. se., she repeatedly said:

"You don't want to take my boy away from me."

She ran out of the house with the boy in her arms, and Sempek said he decided to take court action.

Sempek's attorney, Donald H. Dalton, pointed out that the natural father is presumed to be the natural guardian.

John H. Coffman, Mrs. Buckley's attorney, pointed out that Sempek had allowed his wife to keep the child and had made no attempt in the past year at least to see it.

After Judge Schweinhaut ruled, Dalton urged that Sempek be allowed to take the boy immediately because he wished to return to his naval base. But Judge Schweinhaut gave the grandmother until today to give up the child, saying:

"I must think of the impact, if any, on this boy. The Navy will take care of the father."

Aide Indicted For $182 Theft At D.C. Morgue

Says He Was Underpaid, Overworked; Court Indicts 33 Others

A District Morgue attendant was indicted yesterday on a charge of purloining $182 in District government funds.

This was among 34 indictments returned in District Court. Others included more than 15 burglaries here in recent months.

The morgue attendant is Carl A. Weigeldt, 30, of 3203 O st. nw. According to police, he took the money from a morgue desk drawer at night between August and January.

Police quoted Weigeldt as saying he stole the funds because he felt underpaid and overworked. The money was received for processing insurance forms and was to be turned over to the local tax collector.

Pvt. John G. Hidy, 18, of Bolling Air Base, was charged with five burglaries in Southeast Washington, involving more than $134.

Hidy told police he engaged on the wave of burglaries in order to pay for an engagement and wedding ring for his fiancee in Pittsburgh.

Joseph S. Watts, 63, of 1424 Q st. nw., was indicted for allegedly attempting to take indecent liberties with three girls, ages 6 through 9. Watts told police he was drunk at the time and could not understand his actions.

William Taylor, 49, of 1622 4th st. nw. was charged with stealing $1215 in meats from the Hot Shoppes, Inc., where he had been an employe.

Rejects Appeal

Union Lets Official's Ouster Stand

The executive board of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders International Union has rejected the appeal of William S. Johnson, ousted local union official, it was learned yesterday.

Johnson, who was business agent for Local 209 of the Cooks, Pastry Cooks and Kitchen Helpers Union, was suspended both as an official and union on the charge of being associated with the Communist Party. Johnson has denied the charge.

The suspension was ordered by Hugo Ernst, international president, following a hearing here conducted by a representative of Ernst. Johnson, who is 47, and lives at 553 24th st. ne., challenged the validity of the hearings and refused to testify.

Appearing before the international executive board, meeting in Miami, Fla., Johnson denied the charges, but the "board refused to believe him," according to Ed F. Miller, general secretary-treasurer of the international union.

Meanwhile, local 209 has elected Joseph Beavers, presently a cook at the Roger Smith Hotel, as business agent to succeed Johnson. Beavers assumes the post on February 28.

The suspension of Johnson is to last six months, at which time he may reapply for membership in the union.

Man Accused in Jail Break Given Liberty by 'Oversight'

One of three prisoners who made an unsuccessful attempt to escape from the Rockville jail last November was released a few days afterward as the result of an "oversight," it was disclosed yesterday. He is still at large.

Thomas S. Carter, 21, of Montrose, Md., was awaiting trial on a larceny charge at the time of the break. He subsequently was tried on the charge and released under a suspended sentence before a warrant could be served in connection with the jailbreak, police said. His release was attributed to the fact that no orders had been issued to detain him pending preparation and service of the jailbreak warrant.

The disclosure came when Carter's two companions in the escape attempt appeared in Montgomery County Circuit Court to stand trial on jailbreak charges. Asked by reporters why Carter was not being tried, Police Lieut. Marion Dayhoff told of his release, and termed the action an "oversight."

The other two participants in the attempt, Albert Lamb, 28, 2403 Pennsylvania ave. nw., and Paul R. Dunagan, 23, of Glen Echo Heights, Md., pleaded guilty to jailbreak charges, and drew suspended terms of five years each in the Maryland House of Correction. Both are now serving seven-year terms in the Maryland Penitentiary on housebreaking charges.

Police said Carter was indicted along with Lamb and Dunagan on the jailbreak charges, and a bench warrant was issued.

Builders Lose Court Battle On Covenant

Connecticut Ave. Site Barred for Erection Of Apartment House

The Saint Lo Construction Co., Inc., lost a fight yesterday in the United States Court of Appeals for permission to build a three-million-dollar apartment house on upper Connecticut ave.

Basis for the ruling is a 41-year-old covenant forbidding business and apartment building on the property. It is located on the east side of Connecticut ave. from Northampton st. to Oliver st., and was once the location of the McReynolds home.

District Official Wins

Winner in the action is Lawrence Koenigsberger, the District's one-man Board of Tax Appeals, who lives back of the proposed site.

According to court records, the Saint Lo firm bought the property for $68,000 to build there an eight-story apartment building and shopping center. The court found that the construction company knew of the covenant and that a few years ago it had been upheld by the courts.

When notified of the proposed construction, Koenigsberger applied for and received an injunction.

In opposing the court order, the company cited the fact that the area is now zoned for stores and shops, but the court held that the covenant took precedence of the zoning.

Decision of Court

The Appeals Court, speaking through Judge E. Barrett Prettyman, admitted that there have been changes in the neighborhood, but said they were insufficient to bear on the over-all situation.

There has been a 59 per cent increase in automobile traffic on the avenue since 1943, but, said the court, since gas rationing was removed, the rest of the city probably would show a corresponding increase.

In a vigorous dissent, Judge Henry W. Edgerton cited the fact that directly across the street from the site there are now liquor stores a shoe store and a furniture repair shop. He said that property values of the residential area back of the proposed building probably would increase were the construction permitted. He said that the apartment building was to be so situated that it would screen the residences behind it from the business and traffic along Connecticut ave.

Bates Proposes Ten $150 Yearly Teacher Raises

D. C. Unit Member Would Cut Automatic Jumps From 15 to 10 And Boost Amount

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.) said yesterday he plans to confer soon with District school officials about the possibility of giving school teachers an annual $150 automatic salary increase in place of the present $100 increase.

Bates, ranking minority member of the House District Committee, said he favors moving teachers from their starting salaries up to the top salaries now allowed in law by a series of 10 annual steps.

Present law gives teachers a $100 annual increase over a period of 15 years. Teachers with a bachelors' degree start at $2500 and can go in 15 years to $4000 under the law. Those with a master's degree start at $3000 and can go in 15 years to $4500. Under Bates' plan the $1500 spread from minimum to maximum would stay the same, but it would be covered in 10 yearly jumps of $150 each instead of 15 jumps of $100 each.

Separate Bill Proposed

The annual automatic increases, it was emphasized, would be treated as a separate issue from the proposal for a retroactive salary increase for teachers and other District employes.

For teachers, a group of three House District subcommittees have recommended a $200 retroactive pay boost, with $330 for policemen and firemen. The raises would be retroactive to last July when a $330 increase was granted to Federal classified workers.

Legislation to give District classified workers the same salary, retroactive to last July, is slated for discussion today in an executive session of a House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee. The meeting will start at 10 a. m.

Also called for 10 a. m. today is a meeting of the House District Judiciary subcommittee to plan later hearings on legislation to extend District rent control and to let Washington have daylight saving time every summer.

White House Gets GAO Bill

Meanwhile the House passed and sent to the White House a bill to increase the cost limit of the new General Accounting Office Building here from $22,850,000 to $25,400,000. The bill was approved by a voice vote, and now goes to the President.

In the Senate, District Chairman J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) introduced a bill to permit investment of trust and fiduciary funds in savings and loan accounts in the District.

In the House, Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.) introduced a bill to tighten the present District law on registration of architects.

Abernethy, chairman of the House District Health, Education and welfare subcommittee, announced that his group will open hearings at 10 a. m. Thursday on a bill by Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) to make Washington's child day-care centers a permanent District program, and a bill by Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) to make United States citizenship a requirement for getting a license to practice medicine in the District.

The House also passed by unanimous consent and sent to the White House a bill authorizing issuance of a 6-cent air mail stamp to commemorate the 200th anniversary of Alexandria this year. The new bill fits the stamp to present air mail rates; legislation passed last year before the rate increase authorized a 5-cent stamp.

1400 A Day

Crowds Jam Tax Bureau For Refunds

Fourteen hundred persons a day crowd the Bureau of Internal Revenue at 12th st. and Constitution ave. nw., seeking to share in the greatest income tax refund operation of Government history.

The bureau has called in scores of field collectors and extra police to process the record crowds. Two out of every three of the hundreds in line from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. are going to receive refunds, as a result of the tax cut granted by the last Congress.

More than 40 million taxpayers nationally will be refunded an estimated two billion dollars. In January alone, 1,500,000 were refunded 70 million dollars.

Only the amount of the refund due, if any, is determined for area residents at the District office. But many taxpayers agreed yesterday after spending 45 minutes with collectors, that the promise of a refund was the next best thing to cash.

Although it is not necessary to pay a personal visit to the revenue office to insure getting the refund, a record number of persons are making the trip.

The captain of the bureau detail, LeRoy Westbury, said yesterday that in normal years the halls are crowded only during the two weeks before the March 15 deadline. But this year, he said, the crowds consist of people eager to be first in line to be paid, instead of last in line to pay.

As a general rule, tax overpayments were made during the first four months of 1948. Although the new withholding rates did not go into effect until May 1, the tax cut applied to the entire year.

5 O'Clock Club Official Pays Liquor Fine

A $200 fine was paid yesterday by the Five O'clock Club, Inc., 621 Pennsylvania ave. nw., for six liquor law violations.

The fine was imposed by Judge George D. Neilson in Municipal Court after Julius J. Levy, vice president of the after-hours club, pleaded guilty. The charges were of keeping and selling whisky without a license.

The Five O'clock Club was one of three after-hours clubs raided August 20 by 100 policemen. It was reported that of 39 persons in the club, only 7 had membership cards, and that whisky was sold over the bar.

After Levy pleaded guilty, Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King ordered nolle prossed charges filed individually against William G. Benjamin, president, and Mary Jane Dowd, a waitress, both charged with keeping and selling whiskey. Also dismissed was a charge of failing to have a restaurant license.

Ernest Dorsey, 66, of 453 17th st. se., died yesterday afternoon at Casualty Hospital as a result of injuries suffered Saturday when he was struck by a Capital Transit bus at 15th st. and Potomac ave. se.

He was the District's eleventh traffic fatality of 1949, and the tenth pedestrian to lose his life.

Police identified the driver of the bus as James A. McWaters, 25, of 3477 23d st. se., who has been an operator for 16 months. Police indicated they had no evidence of improper driving, but said that McWaters will appear at a coroner's inquest.

Dorsey never regained consciousness.

Morris Backs Bill On Training School

Edgar Morris, chairman of the District Board of Public Welfare, yesterday urged Congress to approve the Commissioners' bill to permit increased use of the National Training School for Girls at MacArthur blvd. and Loughborough rd. nw.

Morris, in a letter to House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.), explained that under present law, girls can be sent to the Training School only by the Juvenile Court.

Under the bill, the girls would be committed to the Welfare Board which would then assign them to the school. Morris said that some wards of the board who would benefit from training at the school are now kept at the Receiving Home.

He said it would be in the interest of economy and in the interest of Negro girls who are wards of the board to use the training school to full capacity.

Two Persons Suffer Flash Fire Burns

Two persons were burned in flash fires yesterday.

Mrs. Ruth M. Beck, 26, of 724 C st. ne., suffered burns about her face, neck and arms when accumulated gas ignited when she was attempting to light the oven in her kitchen stove. She walked to Casualty Hospital, where she received emergency treatment, and then was transfered to Bethesda Naval Hospital.

John L. Jones, 68, of Clinton, Md., an engineer at the Augustinian College, 3900 Harewood rd. ne., was burned about the face, hands and arms when cleaning out pipes of a furnace. He was admitted to Providence Hospital.

A dog's warning early yesterday aroused three persons in time for them to flee their home at 2911 Northampton st. nw. after a fire, originating in an oil burner, spread smoke through the basement.

Gregory A. Psaltis, restaurant owner, his son, Edmund, 19, and daughter, Mary, 18, were asleep when the fire broke out around 2 a. m. Their Spitz dog, Butch, apparently aroused them by his frantic barking.

'Mean' Man Jailed

By his own admission, Charles A. Jackson, 59, is a mean man. He's also rather irritable when he wakes up.

As a result of that last attribute, Judge Walter J. Casey of Municipal Court sent Jackson, 4413 A st. se., to jail for the next 90 days for carrying a knife and threats.

J. R. Jones, a Capital Transit Co. motorman, told the court that at 2 a. m. Sunday aboard his streetcar, he noticed Jackson asleep on a seat with his streetcar pass beside him. Jones said he awakened Jackson who came up shouting.

"Don't mess with me. I'm from Georgia and I'm a mean man," said Jackson as he pulled out a pocketknife and advanced on the motorman.

Jones said he called a policeman passing by, and the knife was found in Jackson's hat.

Motorist Acquitted

Judge George D. Neilson of Municipal Court yesterday ordered the acquittal of Jerry B. Lichtenberg, 18, charged with operating an automobile after permit suspension.

Litchenberg, of 5217 Connecticut ave. nw., was acquitted because the official court information lacked the month during which the alleged offense occurred. Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph A. Lowther said the omission was due to a clerical accident.

According to police, the permit was suspended October 31 for speeding. He was again arrested November 6 while driving at 12th and Independence ave. sw., and charged with driving on the suspended permit.

Witness is Fined

A grocer was fined $25 yesterday for contempt of District Court in wailing to appear when called as a witness.

He is Harry Katz, who operates a grocery at 2445 Nichols ave. se. He was the main Government witness in the burglary case against Jerome Goldman, 38, of 1167 Stevens rd. se., and James A. King, 22, 1413 Howard rd. se., accused of taking $29 in the burglary.

When Katz declared to Judge Richmond B. Keech that he was busy in his store and had to go to the bank, the jurist declared: "That will cost you $25."

The judge said that Katz had made statements not appropriate to a citizen of the United States. Goldman then pleaded guilty. King's case was poseponed for appointment of counsel.

Jury Trial Granted

Fred Swiney, 56, of 2827 11th st. nw., yesterday was granted a jury trial March 10 in Municipal Court on seven false pretense charges. According to police, Swiney accepted $180 fraudulently in deposits from seven prospective tenants for an apartment at 1110 Columbia rd. nw., with which Swiney had no connection.

Illegal Parkers Given Week To Reform

A "week of grace" for motorists in the habit of illegally parking in public spaces began yesterday under warning that next week police will clamp down on violators.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, has warned that motorists using public spaces for parking will have seven days in which to change their habits and find other parking spaces.

After the "week of grace," there will be no leniency by police in pressing charges for such parking violation, Barrett declared.

Public space applies to the space between the curb and building line and includes driveways, garage entrances, lawns, areas and so forth.

Traffic Tickets Canceled For 5 Embassy Workers

A motorist, who parked his car late at night and, in the darkness, failed to observe an "Emergency-a "No Parking" sign, was one of 101 motorist for whom traffic tickets were adjusted by police last week.

He was Robert A. Black of 1321 N st. nw., who received a warning for the violation.

Traffic tickets were canceled for the following motorists because of diplomatic immunity: Reuben J. Gordon, Chilean Embassy, parked in alley; W. M. Pastor, British Embassy, parked in alley; Antonio Vega, Chilean Embassy, parked in alley; Juan H. Alfaro, Embassy of Uruguay, parked in a "no parking from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m." zone; Dusan Marusic, Yugoslav Embassy, parked overtime.

2-State Oyster Control Mapped

Colonial Beach, Va., Feb. 21 (AP). Plans for tight bi-state control over oystering in the Potomac River emerged today from a meeting of Maryland and Virginia legislators here over the weekend.

Tentative leislation prepared for introduction into the Maryland General Assembly would set up a three-member commission with full authority over the seafood industry in the river which has been the source of somewhat strained relations between the two States in the past.

General Easley, Killed in 1945, To Be Reburied Wednesday

Brig. Gen. Claudius M. Easley, 53, assistant commander of the Ninety-sixth Infantry Division, who was killed on Okinawa in June, 1945, will be reburied at 3 p. m. Wednesday in Arlington Cemetery.

Brig. Gen. Easley

General Easley began his service career doing border patrol duty with the Texas National Guard following his graduation from the Texas A. and M. College in 1917. The same year he entered the Army Service School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

After his promotion to brigadier in July, 1942, he was assigned to the Ninety-sixth Division. He had been wounded by a Japanese sniper on Leyte in November, 1944, but returned to duty a month later. He held the Silver Star and Legion of Merit for action on Leyte and Okinawa.

General Easley is survived by his wife, Mrs. Inez W. Easley, 3601 Connecticut ave. nw.; a son, Maj. C. M. Beasley, jr., now stationed in Paris; two sisters, Miss Annie May Easley, San Francisco, and Mrs. J. Douglass Kennedy, Houston, Tex., and a brother, K. Homan Easley, Waco, Tex.

Reburial services for Pfc. Nan Sue Porter, 24, who died in Italy in 1944 while serving with the Women's Army Corps, will be held at 1 p. m. Friday in the Chambers Funeral Home, 1400 Chapin st. nw.

The only child of Mr. and Mrs. B. Myrick Porter of Richmond, Va., Private Porter attended Roosevelt High School here during 1937 and 1938. She enlisted in the Women's Auxiliary Corps a few months after Pearl Harbor and served overseas with the Motor Transport Corps.

She was stricken with polio in Naples, Italy, and died on August 6, 1944. Two months before her death, Private Porter was decorated in Algiers with the Driver's Medal for excellent performance. She also wore the European, African and Middle Eastern campaign ribbons with one battle star.

Bodies of 61 D. C. Area Men Arrive on Transport

Sixty-one Washington area servicemen who lost their lives during World War II have been returned to the United States from the Pacific war theaters aboard the Army transport Dalton Victory, the Army announced yesterday.

The men were among 5806 war dead originally buried in cemeteries on Saipan, Iwo Jima, Tinian, Guam and Hawaii.

Next of kin have been notified of the ship's arrival, the Army said, and will be notified again when the bodies reach the regional distribution centers of the American Graves Registration Service.

Diabetics Warned of Coma Perils

Premature aging processes, chief cause of death among diabetics, may be averted by prevention of diabetic coma, Dr. Elliott P. Joslin declared here yesterday.

And diabetic comas today result only from "ignorance or neglect," the noted diabetes authority stated.

He spoke at public meeting sponsored jointly by the Middle Atlantic Association of Podiatrists-Chiropodists and the District Lay Society of Diabetics, at Hotel Shoreham.

Dr. Joslin of Boston's Deaconess Hospital, said in interview that the tie-in of arteriosclerosis (hardening of the arteries) and the coma, severe phase of diabetes, was recently established by close study of patients who have been under insulin and diet treatment for 20 years or more.

The study, he said, revealed that those with histories of diabetic coma show progressive symptoms of arterio-sclerosis, and in direct relation to the number of their attacks (comas). Those who never suffered coma are relatively free of the aging symptoms.

With today's means of early detection of diabetes and insulin therapy to control the disease, he declared, "no one need ever go into diabetic coma." Those who do, he added, do so either before they are known to be diabetic, or by failure to follow prescribed treatments after diagnosis.

He recommended that all diabetics make "birthday urine tests" of members of their families, pointing out that the incidence of the disease is four times as common in these families as it is in general population surveys.

"If we ever expect to find the estimated one million unknown diabetics in this country," Dr. Joslin declared, "we must do it through studies of relatives of the known diabetics."

From general population detection surveys, he said, only one diabetic child is uncovered for every 2500 examined. The ratio, however, mounts to one out of 45 for women over 60 years of age.

Although arteriosclerosis today accounts for 67 per cent of the deaths of diabetics, Dr. Joslin said, the statistic should be more comforting than alarming to the diabetic.

"Diabetics, before insulin, didn't live long enough to die from this cause," he said.

He pointed out that in the early 20s, before discovery of insulin, the life expectancy of a diabetic was four to six years after onset of the disease. At that time, he said, 63.8 per cent died in diabetic coma.

In contrast, said Dr. Joslin, today less than two per cent die in coma, and the life expectancy was increased to 14 years by 1946. It has gone even higher since the last official figures were compiled, he added.

Mrs. Conard Dies; Funeral On Thursday

Mrs. Dora Allen Conard, 75, the wife of Rear Admiral Charles Conard, SC, USN (ret.), died yesterday in the Bethesda Naval Medical Center after a three weeks illness.

Mrs. Conard

Mrs. Conrad who lived with her husband at 2311 Connecticut ave. nw., was born in Yokohama, Japan, the daughter of Pay Inspector Robert Wright Allen USN. She lived her early life at Navy Yards on the East and West Coasts, and attended Wellesley College

A perm nent resident of the District since 1935, Mrs. Conard spent several years in Washington previously during the periods of her husband's duty here.

Widely interested in dramatics, she was a member of the Washington Arts Club. Her activities included composition of children's plays among which are "Godmother to the Rescue" and "A Yedo Flower."

She was also a member of the Washington Club and through her husband was a member of the Chevy Chase Club and the Army and Navy Club.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Conard is survived by six children, Mrs. Kenneth Gordon, 1708 Newton st., nw.; Mrs. Maurice Brady, 5118 Jamestown rd., Yorktown Village, Md.; Lieut. Barbara A. Conard, W. USN, 4007 Connecticut ave. nw.; Mrs. Theodore G. Haff, San Juan, Puerto Rico; Mrs. E. M. Jackson, jr., Annapolis, Md., and Lieut. Comdr. Charles A. Conard, USNR, 4801 Chesapeake st. nw.

William Summerbell

William Summerbell, 61, a retired Ordnance Department engineer, died Sunday at his home, 1657 31st. st. nw., after a short illness.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. today at the Georgetown Presbyterian Church, 31st and P sts. nw. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery with Masonic services.

Born in Newcastle Upon Tyne, England, Mr. Summerbell graduated from the Armstrong Engineering College of that country. He came to America in 1913 and worked for the Bethlehem Steel Co., and the Savage Arms Co., before entering Government service in 1918.

During his Government career, Mr. Summerbell worked at the Watervliet Arsenal in New York, at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Aberdeen, Md., and recently in the Army Ordnance Department at the Pentagon. He retired in November, 1948.

Mr. Summerbell was a member of the Harmony Lodge No. 17, F. A. A. M. and a past high priest of the Washington Chapter, Royal Arch Masons. He also was a member of the Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Edith Summerbell, 4619 Q st. nw., and a sister, Mrs. Alice Marshall, Newcastle Upon Tyne.

Maj. Gen. E. E. Booth

Funeral services for Maj. Gen. Ewin E. Booth, USA (retired), who died Saturday night at Walter Reed Hospital, will be held at 10 a. m. Wednesday in the chapel at Fort Myer. Burial will be in Arlington cemetery.

General Booth, who began his Army career as a second lieutenant in the Philippines, retired as the commanding general of the Philippine Department in 1943.

He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Gladys Booth Thomas, 4707 Harrison st., Chevy Chase, Md., and one grandson.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Adele D. Chadwick; two sons, Harrison, State representative from Winchester, and John P., of the Washington Bureau of the Associated Press; a daughter, Mrs. William H. Mitchell, jr., Winchester, and a sister, Miss Mary H. Chadwick of Bradford.

C. E. Bright, Supreme Court Printer, Dies

Clarence E. Bright, 73, confidential printer for the United States Supreme Court for more than 55 years, died early yesterday at his home, 7125 16th st. nw.

Mr. Bright

During his years of service with the high court, Mr. Bright held what was probably the most closely guarded printing job in the Nation—directing the printing of the Supreme Court's opinions.

Rather than trust any outsider with that job when he retired in 1946, the Supreme Court turned over direction of the highly specialized printing work to the Government Printing Office.

Fidelity Praised by Vinson

In tribute to his efforts to prevent disclosure of high court opinions—and far-reaching repercussions which would follow any such "leak"—Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson said of him, in 1946:

"For more than a half century Mr. Bright has served the court with complete fidelity, bringing to his important and confidential work the advantages of unique skill and ability."

A native of Washington, Mr. Bright in 1891 joined the printing firm of Joseph L. Pearson, first located at 9th and E sts. nw., and later at 519 11th st. nw.

Knew Many Justices

This firm, since the Civil War, held the contract for printing the court's opinions, and Mr. Bright became manager of the firm, then owner.

During his work, he became a close friend of many Justices—particularly Oliver Wendell Holmes, jr.—who came to his print shop to make last-minute changes or corrections in opinions.

Upon his retirement, the Supreme Court set up a composing room of its own in the court basement, staffed by the GPO printers.

A 32d degree Mason, Mr. Bright was a member of St. John's Lodge No. 11, F.A.A.M., and an active member of the Elks.

Funeral Services Wednesday

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sophia S. Bright; a daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley of the 16th st. address; a sister, Mrs. Alice J. Welch, 1324 Euclid st. nw.; grandson, Donald Bright Buckley, and a great-grandson, Geoffrey Bright Buckley, both of Baltimore.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Wednesday at Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw., with the Rev. Dr. A. Powell Davies, of All Souls' (Unitarian) Church, officiating. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

John S. Calvert

New Market, Va., Feb. 21 (AP).—John Strother Calvert, former general superintendent of Western Union's southern division, died in Winchester Memorial Hospital today. He was 76.

Calvert was with Western Union for 41 years before retiring in 1931. During that time he traveled as Western Union representative with four men who were or became President.

In 1898 he accompanied President McKinley on a tour of the South. In 1929 he went with former President Hoover to South America. He also accompanied Theodore Roosevelt and Calvin Coolidge in tours of this country.

After his retirement from the wire company, Calvert returned to his hometown of New Market. He reorganized the Citizens National Bank here in 1934. He retired as president of the bank last August.

During his Western Union service, Calvert was district superintendent at Richmond and Jacksonville, Fla., as well as in Atlanta, and also held a position in the company's New York office.

Samuel V. Leech

Funeral services for Samuel Vanderlip Leech, 76, of 837 22d st. nw., will be held today at 2 p. m. in Gawler's funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw. Burial will be in Prospect Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Leech died Sunday at Iliff Nursing Home in Dunn Loring, Va., after an illness of several months.

A native of Washington, he retired from the Quartermaster General's office about 10 years ago. He had worked there in a clerical capacity for about 35 years.

Mr. Leech, who attended the old Force School, owned a cigar store and barber shop at 13th and G sts. in the early 1900s.

He was a direct descendant of Lawrence Leech who came from England with the Rev. Francis Higginson and settled in Salem, Mass., in 1629.

His wife, the former Miss Mary Kernan, died eight years ago. Surviving is one son, Samuel A. Leech, former organist and choir director of St. Paul's Episcopal church; a brother, Abner Y. Leech, jr., of Chevy Chase, and two sisters, Mrs. H. F. Lerch and Mrs. C. C. Hungerford, of this city.

V. I. Lebedev-Kumach

Moscow, Feb. 21 (AP).—Vasili Ivanovich Lebedev-Kumach, a widely known poet and publicist, died yesterday. He was best known for the lyrics he wrote for the popular songs of composer Dunayevsky.

S. H. McCrory Dies After Heart Attack

Samuel Henry McCrory, 69, pioneer agricultural engineer who was chief of the Department of Agriculture's bureau of agricultural engineering when he retired in 1946, died Friday following a heart attack.

Mr. McCrory

A resident of the District since 1912, Mr. McCrory was at his home, 6811 6th st. nw., when stricken.

He was married in 1909 to the former Miss Blanche Severe of Iowa, who died here in 1938.

Mr. McCrory was named in 1938 as the first recipient of John Deere gold medal, awarded by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, as a memorial to the man who "hammered a piece of sawblade into a first all-steel moldboard, providing a plow that solved" stubborn tillage problems.

A consultant on drainage problems during World War I, Mr. McCrory headed the department's hemp supply problems during World War II. He retired in 1946.

Mr. McCrory then went to Iraq and Iran on United Nations flood control projects and also made similar studies for the Egyptian government.

He was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Washington Society of Engineers, the Cosmos Club here, the Thirteen Club and the Takoma Lodge No. 29, F. A. A. M.

Mr. McCrory is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Russell E. Stanford of Richland, Wash., and Mrs. Thomas A. Rice of Salzburg, Austria; a sister, Miss Carrie McCrory, with whom he lived at 6811 6th st. nw., and a brother, John McCrory, Canoga, Calif.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 3 p. m. at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

H. W. Howard Dies; Lifelong D. C. Resident

Harry Wheaton Howard, 78, composer and organist at the Church of the Immaculate Conception since 1900, died of a heart attack Sunday at his residence, 918 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Mr. Howard

Mr. Howard's career began in 1892 when he became organist at Calvary Baptist Church. After three years there, he took a similar position at the Holy Trinity Catholic Church in Georgetown where he remained until 1900.

A lifelong District resident, he was the only child of Horatio N. Howard and Anna Allen Howard who were cousins of Gen. O. O. Howard, the co-founder of Howard University.

Mr. Howard attended Central High School and took his musical training at the Berlin Conservatory. Besides his work as church organist, he also served for many years as choirmaster and as a musical instructor at the Immaculate Heart Academy, during which time he wrote music for several plays and operettas staged by the academy.

In the religious field, Mr. Howard composed a widely used arrangement for the Ave Maria, and also wrote original music for Pater Noster, Sweet Gentlest Lady and Memorare. He also was an avid stamp collector and builder of model steamboats.

Mr. Howard was unmarried and leaves no close survivors.

Solemn high requiem mass will be sung Wednesday at 9 a. m. at the Immaculate Conception Church, 8th and N sts. nw. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Abraham Shapiro

Brookline, Mass., Feb. 21 (AP).—More than 3000 persons gathered at Temple Kehillath Israel yesterday to pay final tribute to Abraham Shapiro, 64, noted philanthropist and cofounder of Brandeis University who died Friday while vacationing in Hollywood, Fla.

Among notables attending the services were President Abram L. Sachar of Brandeis University, President Leonard Carmichael of Tufts College, President Daniel L. Marsh of Boston University, Gov. Paul A. Dever, Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, and Mayor James M. Curley of Boston.

Theodore P. Adams

Plymouth, Mass., Feb. 21 (AP).—Theodore Parker Adams, 103, eldest living graduate of Harvard, died Saturday, it was revealed today.

A native of Boston, he was graduated from Havard College in 1867. He was headmaster of Cambridge Latin School until his retirement in 1906. Since that time he had lived in Plymouth.

He was a former vice president of the Pilgrim Society and was considered a geneological expert. He was a descendant of William Harlow, builder of the famed old Harlow house, now a Plymouth museum.

His widow is his only survivor.

What To Do For That Sluggish, Down-and-Out Feeling

Remember the time when you could eat like a horse, bubbled-over with energy, felt happy as a lark? Was it not because you liked to eat—didn't know what indigestion was, felt strong as an ox? As age advances the "old stomach and the ever-changing blood" need help. Now you may again release vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give of that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 19, Is Infatuated With Lad, 21, Who Has Been Around and Persuasively Insists on Privileges She Disapproves

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Three months ago I met Bill on a blind date, and we have been dating regularly since then. Bill is 21 and I am 19. He has told me that he loves me very much, and I love him very much; but he is in school, so marriage is out of the question for several years.

Bill is very mature for his years and has "been around," whereas I have not. This he knows; in fact, he has mentioned it himself. The problem is that he wants privileges in lovemaking that I feel are wrong; but he argues that "It isn't wrong if we are in love; it would be wrong if we weren't,"—and gradually, against my better judgment, I am yielding to his demands.

Emotionally we are different types. He is very ardent and I am reserved; and he said, at first, that I was very cold to him, and that if I continued to act that way we might as well break off, as we could never make a go of things. I felt hurt and dismayed, because I do love him; and I forced myself to try to please him; but I am completely confused and uneasy.

Please understand, we haven't literally started an affair, but the gist of our relationship is to that effect, and I don't think it's right. I think we should wait until we are married; but if I say so, Bill takes the attitude that I don't love him. I have a feeling that something is going to happen to us, and I don't know what I would do if we parted.

I don't feel sure of Bill, and once when I told him about my misgivings, he said, "If I didn't love you, do you think I'd waste my time seeing you, when I could go out with all sorts of girls—," etc. Between dates, when I don't see Bill, I am constantly thinking about the problem, as I see it; yet I cannot confide in anyone I know—so please try to help me get my bearings. N. S.

Serious Abuse of Word 'Love'

DEAR N. S.: Love has to do with appreciation of "the good, the beautiful and true" in the personality of the beloved, whereas Bill is engrossed in degrading you,—with blank indifference to the destructive effects on your mental health and rather frail, indecisive character.

Bill doesn't love you. He is trying to make a conquest of you, offering no commitments of any kind; and you are trying to get a man—on almost any terms, dear Lord. You've clung to vestiges of "honor" until now, only because you're not sure that "giving all" is the way to capture Bill.

Take a look at yourself objectively. In relation to Bill you are talking one way, but acting another. You are saying "No, no," while surrendering piecemeal to his seduction campaign; and since actions speak louder than words, naturally Bill is encouraged to feel that your inclinations are the same as his, but that you want to be coaxed for the sake of the record,—which is the truth, when you get right down to it.

Certainly it can't be said that Bill sandbagged you into this thing, as I'm sure he will tell you emphatically when he gets ready to wash his hands of you. In effect he simply said, "It's this or nothing," and you went along of your own accord, trying to excuse your actions by twittering anxiously, or hopefully, of love and marriage; and if he echoes that sad sentiment, it is with cynical expediency, not with any sincerity.

As a louse who has been around, Bill has been over this road before, and he has a cynic knowledge of women's ways of "saving face" when tiptoeing nervously down the first mile of the Primrose Path. Maybe you haven't seen much of life, but neither did you just get here from Mars. You are 19, and you know what you are doing; also, that you are on the wrong track now. What you don't understand, perhaps, is why you are acting such a fool.

The potential help for problems like this to get psychologically-trained clergymen into the field, available as confidantes to lonely, heart-hungry, unloved young persons—who want friends and fun and a social program, and don't know where to begin to find them. Fundamentally you are lonely and at loose ends, scratching desperately for beaux, hence you feel in no position to confidently reject displeasing approaches. But in heaven's name have the good sense to kick Bill in the teeth and get rid of him. M. H.

Diplomat's Handbook

John Bull in Mauritania: Or How to Be a Success In His Majesty's Service

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THIS DEPARTMENT'S newly favorite author is a fascinating, though still unknown to us, gentleman called Marcus Cheke. Mr. Cheke is His Majesty's (British) Vice Marshal of the Diplomatic Corps. His informative little tome, "Guidance on foreign usages and ceremony, and other matters, for a Member of His Majesty's Foreign Service on his first appointment to a Post Abroad," made most entertaining weekend reading.

Mr. Cheke after apparently, 12 years of foreign posts, became concerned about the embryo British diplomat abroad for the first time, and "thrown into a society with which he is wholly unfamiliar."

The book deals with a sole subject—"How to establish and conduct those social relationships which it is his duty to cultivate in such a post." Since many Washingtonians in their casual social round can scarcely avoid diplomats, in an effort for better understanding between ordinary mortal and diplomat, we're passing on Mr. C.'s helpful hints.

Acquiring the Social Graces

FOR CONVENIENCE Mr. Cheke names his tyro (a Third Secretary) John Bull; the latter's boss, H. M.'s Ambassador, Sir Henry Sealingwax. There's a Mrs. John Bull and, of course, a Lady Sealingwax. Mr. Cheke commences with the thesis that John Bull, recently removed from the Foreign Office grind to the more glamorous and more highly paid (he's given an expense account for entertaining) job abroad, is a social washout. The reason being that young Bull (and here Cheke quotes Hilaire Belloc

". . . rose in less than half an hour
To riches, dignity and power"

And handicapped by ignorance of foreign society, it is too much for him. So he mills around with his compatriots and, instead of acting as "antenna" for his Ambassador by accepting invitations to foreign houses, he gets in the rut of playing tennis at the local British club. Here's how Cheke yanks him out . . .

Cheke first points out an equally nebulous Third Secretary of the Netherlands Embassy, a slick guy, adept at all social graces and who, apparently without effort, achieves the Nirvana of a perfect diplomat's day, "all in one day (he) lunches with a banker, takes a cocktail in one of the legations, dines with a deputy, and spends the evening in the house of a hostess who is a close friend of the Minister of Finance." (We forgot to add that Bull is en poste in the mythical country of "Mauritania.")

Entertaining the Bores

WITH this target to aim for, Bull goes about hitting his personal bull's eye by following these rules about parties. The Bulls must arrive five minutes early for luncheons and dinners at their embassy. Mrs. Bull must be on her toes to help the Ambassadress, always be within reach. Mr. Bull, too, should contact his Ambassadress at least once during the evening and "must not, therefore, spend an entire hour seated lost in the garden with a girl." Nor, if Mr. Bull is the constant type, should he and Mrs. Bull "spend the evening glued to each other's sides."

For receptions, the Bulls must turn up 10 minutes early and even if the Ambassador isn't already in the drawing room, they should take their places there "in readiness to greet any early arrivals" because at a "reception at a British Embassy such eager guests are frequent"!

To continue: "One of their chief duties will be to be affable to bores. There are always to be found at official parties some personages whose rank and influence have caused them to be invited, but who are devoid of social graces and who consequently stand around in dreary isolation. Nothing ruins the appearance of a party so surely as dreary individuals standing in gloomy and solitary silence. Therefore it is incumbent on Mr. and Mrs. Bull not only to avoid standing in gloomy silence themselves but to prevent other people from doing so either."

Learn to Play Bridge

SO MUCH for the gaiety of British Embassy parties—now, on to dinner at a foreigner's house! It's a "good idea to learn to play bridge—as he has to stay until important guests have gone, it is generally necessary for him to stay until the bitter end of even the most tedious dinners, and he will find it much more agreeable to play a hand of cards than to sit up half the night making conversation with some boring, important old lady."

Once hooked for dinner, however, this is what he must do:

"On sitting down, Mr. Bull should without delay engage one of his two neighbors at table in conversation—the thing to avoid is silence. Get everyone to talk with his or her neighbor and the table will have an animated appearance. It often happens."

Here, perhaps, Mr. Cheke dips into bitter personal experience: "Though at some stage of the meal you will find that both your neighbors are in deep conversation but not with YOU. In this case you must make the best of a bad job, be careful not to fall into a vacant stare and take the first opportunity of getting back into talk."

The Smart Set

WITH young Bull now chatty, bridgeplaying and antimated of physiognomy, Mr. Cheke touches on the more intimate nuances of foreign hospitality in a country where the ladies and gentlemen remain together after dinner . . . "A point to remember is that in a foreign house his host will not offer his guests an opportunity to retire. If Mr. Bull wishes to leave the drawing room during the course of an evening he must simply stroll from the room at an opportune moment and ask a servant to direct him to the cloak room."

Mr. Cheke has studied what he calls the "Smart Set" conscientiously. The smart set has its uses to the rising diplomat who, because of his membership "in the Diplomatic Corps (and, moreover, attached to the British Embassy) is sufficient passport and recommendation."

At smart set functions, "bankers and industrialists with expert knowledge of economic trends are to be found in that world and acquaintances made and information gained in this setting may be of value to the commercial side of the mission."

Mr. Cheke, evidently a wow with the ladies, goes on cozily, "Some of the women who belong to it make a point of knowing all the latest love affairs in the Capital and gossip of this sort, trivial as it may seem, may save Sir Henry Sealingwax from inviting to the same dinner party two officials who happen to be at daggers drawn."

All this sounds terribly exciting but alas, Mr. Cheke punctures young Bull's pleasure in smart set activities by adding "Mr. Bull should bear in mind that as a reflection of Mauritanian public opinion, the smart set is unreliable.

Handling the Press

MR. CHEKE, though usually sensitive to his surroundings, in our biased opinion, underestimates the power of the press. "Any diplomatist worth his pay," he states smugly, "should know how to handle pressmen, whether British or foreign, so as to gain their confidence without giving away state secrets." He doesn't mention presswomen, though, and we've a sneaking suspicion that in his time, Mr. C., too sure of being able to "handle," may have given away a couple of state secrets to lady journalists!

As final social instruction, Mr. Bull is advised never to slip up on a funeral. "In some countries public funerals are unrivalled as occasions in which to cultivate acquaintances . . . How many an interesting political connection was first conceived by a certain foreign head of mission in a convulsive handshake in a funeral cortege and cemented by giving him a lift home in his car from the cemetery."

Now you know all about diplomats. In line of duty we have to put up with them and, in all honesty, find them at times most appealing. But a line has to be drawn somewhere. We will not have any diplomat, British or otherwise, making political connections at our funeral. We're making a will to that effect.

AT A LUNCHEON sponsored by the World Affairs Center yesterday, Mme. Adrienne Boissevain spoke on woman's role in the movement toward world unity. She is shown above explaining the "National Skirt," which Holland feminists use as their symbol, to Mrs. Harold Burton (center), and Mrs. Hale Shenefield.

'National Skirt' Leader Talks to Capitalites About Women's Role in World Unity

Mme. Adrienne Boissevain, Netherlands feminist, urged yesterday that women of America take an active part in restoring or duplicating documents stolen from the International Archives for Women in Amsterdam by the Nazis during the last war.

She was guest speaker at a luncheon at the Sulgrave Club sponsored by the Washington World Affairs Center.

Mme. Boissevain also explained the "National Skirt" movement she launched in Holland that is spreading through Europe. The Netherlands leader and her followers wear brightly colored patchwork skirts as a symbol of woman's value in establishment of world unity.

The luncheon was arranged by Mrs. Hale T. Shenefield, vice president of the World Affairs Center, together with Mrs. Harold H. Burton, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and Mrs. George Maurice Morris.

Among the other prominent Washington women who attended were Mrs. Tom Connally, Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Mrs. Ralph Flanders, Mrs. William F. Knowland, Mrs. John Steelman, Mrs. Angus Dun, Mrs. George Mesta, Mrs. Robert Freer, Mrs. James Houghteling, Mrs. J. Bruce Kremer, Mrs. Frederick Livesey, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Oscar Cox, Mrs. Arthur Sweetser, Mrs. DeForest Anthony, Mrs. Helen Norfleet and Mrs. Mrs. Richard Harkness.

On the Capital Party Calendar . . .

THE INDIAN AMBASSADOR and Lady Rama Rau's last day in the Capital yesterday was packed with parties in their honor.

The popular Ambassador and his wife, who will leave Washington this morning for New York, were honored by the First Secretary of the Indian Embassy and Mrs. I. S. Chopra at a cocktail party at the Embassy and then by the Indian Education Officer and Mrs. Ashfaque Husain at a dinner. Earlier Mrs. James Souby had a luncheon at her home for Lady Rau. Guests included Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Mrs. Edmund Montgomery, Miss Grace McGerr, Mrs. Russell Bennett, Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. Frederick Gould, Mrs. Albert Carter, Mrs. Harry Vaughan, and Mrs. John H. Berry, mother of the hostess, who assisted at the luncheon.

Mme. Ala, wife of the Iranian Ambassador, and her mother, Mme. Masserolmolk, were there, as was Lady Rama Rau's daughter, Mrs. Premilla Wagle; Princess Zorah Maim, Mme. El-Kouhri, wife of the Syrian Minister; Mrs. J. C. Windsor Lewis whose husband is Military Attache of the British Embassy, Mme. D. Chaudhuri, wife of the Indian Military and Air Attache, and Mme. I. S. Chopra, wife of the Indian Counselor.

Guests at the Chopra's party consisted mostly of representatives from Embassy Row and the State Department. Others who attended include the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Martin, jr., Mrs. Martin Vogel, Mr. and Mrs. George Merrill, Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Dr. and Mrs. Edward C. Acheson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt and their daughter, Jane, Senator and Mrs. John McClellan, Representative and Mrs. Mike Mansfield, Representative and Mrs. Donald Jackson, Miss Harriet Johnson and J. J. Singh and K. A. D. Naroji, both of New York.

Among the guests at Mr. and Mrs. Husain's dinner, given at 8:30 at the Chancery on Massachusetts ave., were the Iranian Ambassador and Mme. Ala, First Secretary of the Chinese Embassy and Mrs. Ku Ahmed Naguib Hashim of the Egyptian Embassy, and William Johnstone of the State Department.

Lady Rau, her daughter, Mrs. Premilla Wagle and the latter's children will sail for England on February 25, but the Ambassador will be in New York until March 17 preparing for his new job as Governor of the Reserve Bank of India.

THE Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Makin entertained at dinner last night at the embassy in honor of the retiring Ambassador of Honduras and Senora de Caceres.

Guests included the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Thomen, Justice and Mrs. Harold H. Burton, Senator and Mrs. Clinton Anderson, Dr. and Mrs. Albert Lleras, and Mr. and Mrs. Eldon P. King.

Mr. Makin will leave tomorrow for Syracuse University, where he received an honorary doctor of laws degree in 1947. He will address the faculty and students on the subject of the United Nations.

Senora de Caceres was honored by Mrs. Wildred Whittemore at a tea yesterday at her home.

And earlier in the day Mme. Chautemps was hostess at a luncheon at the Statler Hotel for the Honduran Ambassador's wife.

MR. AND MRS. RANDOLPH G. BISHOP entertained at cocktails Sunday afternoon in their home in Chevy Chase, Md., in honor of Mrs. Bishop's niece and her daughter, Mrs. Barbara Wolcott and Miss Diane Wolcott of Beverly Hills, Calif., who are spending some time here. More than 60 guests were invited to the party. Mrs. Ralph Chesney Bishop assisted the hostess.

On Wednesday Miss Wolcott will be hostess at luncheon in the Shoreham, entertaining for a group of her California school friends now attending Mount Vernon Seminary.

LEO F. MULLIN entertained at a buffet supper last evening at his farm in Olney, Md., honoring several of his friends who have February birthdays.

The honor guests included Miss Marie Mount, dean of home economics at the University of Maryland; Mr. and Mrs. Claude Watts, Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Minnier Hostettler.

Nation's Builders Told

Ranch-Type Ramblers, 'Personality' Kitchens Are Women's Housing Choice

By Conrad P. Harness

CHICAGO, Feb. 21.—Over 6000 home builders, including 64 from Washington, today were told in no uncertain terms that they were not building the type of home that most women want.

Delegates to the annual convention of the National Association of Home Builders, in session here, heard women builders tell what women want in the way of housing. Mrs. R. B. Butler, Tulsa home builder, said that women builders are best able to forecast what other women want in a home. She is one of 40 women builders attending the convention.

Mrs. Butler disclosed the results of a survey she made of 3000 housewives, asking "if you were building a house today, name three or more features you would incorporate in that home." Nearly 99 per cent wanted dining rooms, she reported. All wanted a kitchen with "personality," equipped with the latest in electrical appliances to cope with lack of household help.

On the 'Wanted List'

High on the "wanted list," Mrs. Butler continued, were the following:

Double garages where one side could be used for storage; a barbeque pit built on the side of the garage for outdoor use in summer time; ranch-style ramblers as the No. 1 choice in architectural styles; large picture windows, provided there is a worthwhile view to see; elimination of "loud" tile around the living room mantel because "it dates the home."

Mrs. Butler told the vast audience that the old pantry is being revived with a new look—"a place to store toothpicks, false teeth, pots and pans, etc."

Interesting housing wants of individual women answering Mrs. Butler's survey disclosed these architectural innovations: no overhead lights in the bedroom, "because a woman looks 10 years younger when light does not shine in her face." Another suggested the kitchen in the center of the house, accessible to den or bedrooms without chasing through the dining room.

Dream Kitchen

Here was one prospective home owner's idea of her kitchen: "A combination kitchen with a breakfast nook, laundry equipment, garbage disposal and dishwasher; wood-burning fireplace; a place to relax and listen to your radio while dishes are being washed, garbage being disposed, clothes washed and a meal cooking—with a timer that automatically cuts off appliances when desired."

Inclusion of many of the items suggested by Mrs. Butler's survey would up the price of a home considerably. This type of higher-priced housing is in direct contrast to the lower-priced "economy housing" which the National Association of Home Builders is suggesting that member builders erect to meet the large demand for housing by families in the $2000 to $3500 income bracket.

Mrs. Henry T. Chaleron, New Orleans builder, pointed out, however, that even lower-priced "economy houses" selling for under $10,000 could be made attractive with a little good taste and imagination.

"It is the lower-priced homes," she said, "that must be given proper land planning, site planting, variation in exteriors to keep out monotony, good simple details so that the small house need not be ordinary."

'Yardville Plan'

Mrs. Mary Davis Gillies of McCall's magazine told of the "Yardville Plan," started in Philadelphia, for improving living conditions of middle and lower income groups by renovating their back yards.

Sponsored by Philadelphia's public and private planning and housing groups in cooperation with McCall's editors, the project transformed 15 unused back yards lining both sides of an alley in a working class section into a cheerful garden plot with grass and flowers, terrace screens and pergolas and recreational area.

Mrs. Gillies said a campaign is under way to interest other cities, including Washington, in applying the Yardville idea to every neighborhood.

GUEST of honor at the eleventh anniversary luncheon of the Washington chapter of the Women's American ORT yesterday was the Swiss Minister to the United States, Charles Bruggmann (center). Mrs. Abe M. Cohen (left) and Mrs. Samuel Gendleman are members of the Washington chapter which provides funds and equipment for nine ORT schools in Switzerland.

Rep. Douglas Hails ORT Role In European Recovery Program

By Nicha Soure

GERMAN recovery in 1950 may mean German domination of Europe in 1953, according to Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas of California. Mrs. Douglas was the guest speaker at the eleventh anniversary luncheon of the Washington chapter of the Women's American ORT held in the Shoreham Hotel yesterday.

Charging the Germans with a program that would ensure victory after the war, "whether it was win, lose or draw," Mrs. Douglas said the Germans were in a better position today than the other countries of Europe. The Germans not only undermined the economic and cultural program of the occupied countries, but they instilled "hate in the bloodstream of the world," she said.

Combating this problem is the ECA, who with the aid of ORT, is giving Europe not only machines, but training people in the use of these machines, she said. Mrs. Douglas described ORT as the "single organization in Europe today that has a going training program."

The California Congresswoman quoted an ECA representative as saying that ORT is training in France not only the Jews but the non-Jews, too, in the use of the ECA machines. Refering to the rehabilitation work of ORT, Mrs. Douglas said that "it is a great moment that in this hour the Jews made this contribution to the world."

"Israel is more than a homeland to Jews," Mrs. Douglas said. "It is a democratic oasis in a sea of feudalism." Having visited Palestine with her husband, she termed the infant state as "one of the great experiments of the world."

"We will have a world in which we can relax if we have organizations with programs that will bring peace. And at the top of that list I place your organization," Mrs. Douglas told ORT members.

Tells of Swiss Schools

Preceding Mrs. Douglas' talk, the Swiss Minister to the United States, Charles Bruggmann praised the work done by ORT in his homeland. The Washington chapter is providing funds and equipment for nine ORT schools in Switzerland, two of which are for children who developed tuberculosis in concentration camps.

Stressing that it was more important to rebuild human beings rather than roads or bridges, the Swiss Minister hoped that the spiritual atmosphere of Switzerland was a contributing factor in establishing the nine ORT schools in his country.

Mrs. Abe M. Cohen, the regional president of the Women's American ORT, pleaded for "decent legislation for the Displaced Persons Bill" in Congress. ORT has rehabilitated 43,000 persons in 1948, Mrs. Cohen said.

Favors Quiz Of Cabinet On All Bills

Representative Helen Sahagan Douglas outlined the working of Congress before a meeting of the Democratic Women's National Council in the Washington Club last night.

Mrs. Douglas told the council she was in favor of having Cabinet members appear in Congress to be questioned on bills by the entire membership, as a constructive change in Capitol Hill proceedings.

Mrs. Douglas called the ECA "the most brotherly program ever taken up in the history of the world," but said she was gravely concerned with the effort of the Eightieth Congress to rebuild Germany.

As important as "housekeeping legislation" is, such as rent control, wage and hour laws, Mrs. Douglas considers human relation legislation of equal importance, she told the Democratic audience.

"The nonself-governing people of the world are on the march," she said, "and whether they are orderly or chaotic depends on leadership. We must live by the principles we stand for and we have to face the civil rights issue."

In a question-and-answer period, the California Representative was asked if Congressmen vote according to party affiliation. Mrs. Douglas replied that "Republicans vote more closely as a unit than Democrats." Then as an after-thought she said, "I don't know, maybe we should do the same."

Keyserling Sees Profits Still Rising

By Genevieve Reynolds

LEON KEYSERLING, vice chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, yesterday declared that this country can not afford another depression any more than it can afford another war. He issued his warning in a luncheon address before members of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Asserting that the cost of living has risen 74 per cent since the war, Keyserling said that the recent 2½ per cent drop from that amount means very little to the mass of consumers.

"Prices and profits are not falling but rising in certain segments of industry," he explained. "For example, there have been no reductions in steel, metals, building materials, fuels and lighting.

"Profits in the steel industry were at an all-time high in January, 1949," he continued.

The speaker said that the three million drop in employment did not indicate the beginning of a depression or deflation, but admitted that a drop to five or six million would be cause for real concern.

Keyserling contended that the current economic situation is being made complex "because of conflicting reports—emanating from those who don't want to take action to curb inflation."

In answer to Administration critics who ask why the Government wants to control prices on some commodities and subsidize others, Keyserling averred that "farm prices must not be allowed to drop so far below other prices so that the farmer would be thrown out of the consumer's market. All prices and incomes must be compatible. In short, to have a balanced economy there must be some selective controls and some subsidizing."

Gray Addresses Goodwill Group On VA Aims

VETERANS' Administrator Maj. Gen. Carl R. Gray, jr., yesterday pledged the VA's continued support of the rehabilitation work done by the Goodwill Industries, which trains and gives gainful employment to handicapped persons. In his address before the fourteenth annual joint meeting of the Goodwill Industries and the Goodwill Guild at the Y.W.C.A., General Gray explained the VA's program of medical and vocational rehabilitation.

He disclosed that on completion of the present construction program the VA will have 172 hospitals with a total of 130,000 beds. But, he added, it is very difficult to get enough doctors, nurses and therapists to staff them.

Preceding General Gray's speech a plaque commemorating Mrs. Ann Hubbard Davis was presented. Mrs. Davis contributed $100,000 in 1935 toward establishment of the Industries and the training school for goodwill workers. She remained an anonymous donor until after her death in December of 1946.

The president of Goodwill Industries, James C. Dulin, jr., made the presentation, and Gen. H. C. Newcomer, Mrs. Davis' former financial adviser, accepted it on behalf of her daughter, Miss Martha Davis of Louisville, Ky.

The meeting yesterday also included election of the following new trustees: William E. Lee, Col. Livingston Waltrous, John S. Bartlett and William L. McClausland. Reelected to the Board of Trustees were Mrs. Wiley Rutledge, president of the Guild, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. Earl Fenning and Randolph Bishop.

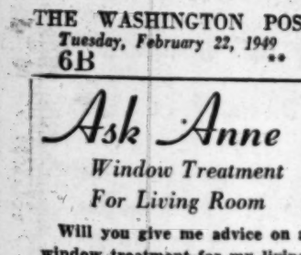
Window Treatment For Living Room

Will you give me advice on a window treatment for my living room? I have two regulation-size windows, separated by a 36-inch wide space with a radiator under both windows. There are Venetian blinds on the windows and I should very much like to drape them as inexpensively as possible. The room is moderately large. B. T. L.

An attractive way to treat this type of window arrangement is to hang the draperies at the side of the window, not over it. In this way, the draperies on the inside edges of the windows can be hung so that they entirely cover the 36-inch wall space between the windows. The draperies on the two outer window edges would be hung to cover the wall approximately

PETUNIA!

I cannot stand
A gruesome dish
Of cauliflower
That's yellowish!



But it wouldn't get yellowish, Petunia, if you'd just add a slice of lemon to the water while it boils.

Bishop-Braken

18 inches beyond that side of the window frame. This treatment gives the window the appearance of being much larger than it is and lets in much more light.

Another treatment which would be more expensive but very effective would be to use a mirror to cover the wall between the windows. Then treat the two windows as one, placing a shaped valance board over the entire arrangement. With this arrangement, the draperies are placed at only the two outer edges of the window.

We recently cleaned our wooden racks with steel wool and bleach and now find that the rungs leave tan marks on the clothes. Do you know of anything that will prevent this from happening? M. M. P.

To restore the finish which you have removed by using steel wool, you could apply liquid wax, allow ample time for it to soak in thoroughly, and then rub it vigorously to remove any surface wax which could discolor the clothes. It may take several applications of wax to seal the wood completely. When the rungs become soiled in the future merely wipe with a damp cloth. Do not scour.

Is there an upholstery school in or around Washington where one can have upholstery work done on furniture by students at a low cost, yet under the direction of capable instructors? J. H.

I'm sorry, I know of no such school.

Can you tell me how to get rid of black letters from feed sacks. Also, how to bleach them? J. L.

The letters should come out readily if you will soak the sacks in a household bleach solution. Use two tablespoons of household bleach to each quart of cold water. Mix thoroughly and let sacks remain in the solution for 15 minutes. Or, you could add two cups of bleach to a washer full of soapy water. Wash the sacks for 8 to 10 minutes in this and rinse thoroughly in three rinse waters. The bleach solution will leave the sacks snowy white, as well as remove the lettering.

I have a pair of red lizard pumps which have developed dark spots, probably in the natural course of events. Is there any way I could clean these? Could I clean a red snakeskin wallet which is not worn, but only soiled? J. G.

I suggest you take the shoes to a repair man to see if the spots can be removed. The most you can safely do at home is to go over them with a good leather cleaner and conditioner. This may or may not remove the spots. Products which can be used on lizard can be purchased at shoe and leather stores. Follow the directions which come with the product you buy. You can use the leather cleaner and conditioner which you buy for your shoes on the wallet.

Is there a store that teaches Norwegian Hardanger work? (It's done on special hardanger cloth and is a cutting of threads and sewing to make beautiful cutout work.) W. T. T.

I know of no store which teaches this art, but Mary Thomas' "Embroidery Book" (William Morrow & Co.) has an instructive chapter on it. Included with the detailed directions for doing it are many illustrations which add immeasurably to the clarity of the discussion. I'm sure you could do the work with this book as a guide. It can be purchased at local book stores.

What's the Verdict?

THE DOMESTIC SCENE

Q. In a divorce suit, the husband charged the wife with adultery. The wife promptly filed a suit for damages, against her husband and two other persons, claiming they had conspired to defame her by falsely charging her with adultery in the divorce compaint. Those whom she sued asked the court to throw out her suit. What will be done?

A. Except for divorce actions, the law usually presumes that a husband and wife are one person, and that therefore it is legally impossible for one to sue the other. Under the older "common law," the suit against all three would be dismissed since the husband would have to join the wife as plaintiff. Under modern practice, the suit against the husband would be dismissed but would be maintainable against the other two.—F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

Transit Radio Brings On "Capital Trance"

Edward S. Wranek of 615 A st. se., muses that it probably won't be long before Capital Transit comes completely under the spell of the radio industry.

Now that we have transit broadcasting, how long will it take for transfers to bear a brief advertising message from the sponsor?

How soon will patrons be helped on and off the cars by polite attendants representing the major soap companies?

Which smart advertiser will be first to reserve blocks of seats in the vehicles, so that passengers bringing a label (or box top) can sit, while others stand?

In short, can the time be too far off when Capital Transit itself will sponsor a commercial which goes:

"You, too, can win the giant jackpot. But you'll have to hurry, because this offer positively expires at midnight tonight, and cannot be extended. Just send in two bus tops and complete this sentence in 25 words or less—'I like waiting in the rain for a bus because . . .'"

LAMB STEW

Wally Bell is still in a stew about meat prices, in spite of recent declines. He postcards: "Mary had a little lamb. She sold it and retired!"

MISCELLANY

Capital Transit is organizing a "Glad-to-Have-You-Aboard" club, with membership limited to those operators who have been commended for courtesy by passengers. Members will be distinguished by shoulder patches . . . Minnie L. Goodwin of 835 C st. sw. says that there are more than 30 shades of "green," and that I ought to differentiate among them when I write of "green coats." Shucks, Minnie, all I know is that if it looks like my complexion, it's green . . . Betty Topley of Berryville, Va., registers a beef about one of Cartoonist Irwin's recent drawings. Betty says that anybody ought to know that a child's first two teeth are both downstairs, and not one up and one down as shown in the cartoon . . . The last time we got a beef on an Irwin mistake was about 500 drawings ago, when somebody noticed that the muleprints on the seat of a cowboy's pants were upside down . . . Another batch of invalid streetcar tokens have arrived for Children's Hospital—this time from Daisy Mae Groves of Washington Grove, Md. . . . The other day I swiped a quickie from the telephone company's magazine "Transmitter." It observed that the difference between a man with six kids and a man with 6 million dollars is that the man with 6 million dollars wants more. Albert Mapou of 3811 Summit ave nw. says that reminds him of the oldie: "Calvin Coolidge is like Santa Claus because they are both fat and jolly and wear long whiskers except Santa Claus" . . . Samuel Zeitlen of 919 S. Orme st., Arlington, Va., wonders whether the science reporter for one of our afternoon contemporaries wasn't a bit mixed up when he wrote recently of a "one-room, five-story" house . . . Even less accurate, suspects Edwin S. Newman of 4604 Addison rd. ne., is the report from the Hill in another afternoon paper. It said: "The 15 Democratic New Yorkers in the Senate of the Eighteenth Congress and the 24 in the Eighty-first Congress keep the White House aware of New York's necessities" . . . Maybe so, but it seems to me that it's downright unfair to let New York have that many Senators.

ARRESTING THOUGHT

Nate Leiderman of 1508 41st st. se., reports that a policeman came to his door recently to solicit funds for the Boys Club. Then Nate asks:

"How could I refuse (not that I wanted to) without being accused of resisting an officer?"

JUST WAIT 15 MINUTES: IT'LL BE RUNNING AGAIN

Pope Haley of Pathfinder Magazine has long been intrigued by the clock displayed in the Shah & Shah window.

A sign beside the clock indicates that this remarkable timepiece is powered by something akin to perpetual motion; a temperature change of two degrees will make it run for 48 hours.

Particularly noteworthy, thinks District Liner Haley, is the fact that the last time he went by the window, the clock had stopped running.

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Mrs. Hansel's Recital Thing Of Beauty

By Paul Hume

Katharine Hansel's song recitals are occasions for admiration in many fields.

First, the beauty of her singing, which is so well controlled and directed. Second, her astonishing gift for continuing to assemble, learn, and perform beautiful songs seldom heard in public, from a wide range of musical epochs.

Last night, with the competent assistance of Theodore Schaefer, the handsome sporano gave a remarkable list of works in the Phillips Gallery. Only two offerings were in English, but one of these, Monica's aria from The Medium by Gian Carlo Menotti, was the finest piece of singing in the entire evening. The only American work represented, Menotti's dramatic scene found a warmth in the singer which she often withheld from the French songs, and the Purcell aria which opened her recital.

The Purcell was in fine style, but showed a tendency noticeable from time to time in Mrs. Hansel's singing, to sharp a trifle. This is a matter too easily corrected for as intelligent a singer as this to allow to continue. The first French songs of the evening, garnered from Faure, Moret, Samazeulh, and Canteloube, were sensitively sung. Of four Poulenc songs, the stormy romantic air seemed a bit out of range. It was good to hear "C" once more.

In the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, William Watkins, organist of the church, Sylvia Meyer, harpist of the National Symphony, and a string orchestra directed by Charles Dana Beaschler, played a program of music for organ solo, and for organ and strings.

The two works in the latter form were Walter Piston's now familiar Prelude and Allegro, and Howard Hanson's concerto for the instruments indicated. The Piston is a fine score, and Hanson suffered both by comparison, and in the fact that it is essentially a weak piece of writing.

Having received its New York premiere only three days ago, it was enterprising programming for Watkins to present it to Washington last night.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Frenchmen Marvel at Canyon

By Drew Pearson

Grand Canyon, Ariz.—Perhaps I shouldn't admit it, but in all my many wanderings about the USA I have never been to the Grand Canyon, and it finally took the French Gratitude Train to get me there.

Pearson

The Santa Fe Railroad invited the French Merci Train visitors to be its guests at the Grand Conyon for a day, and since they have been traveling all hours of the day and night and needed a rest, I urged them to take the day off and see America's greatest scenic sight.

They got their first breath-taking view early in the morning just after rolling out of their Pullman. For about two minutes they gazed down—a mile straight down—to where the muddy Colorado River looked like a dirty ribbon winding in and out of gorges—so small at that distance, it seemed you could step across it. And they gazed 14 miles across to the gorge on the other side, purple and red and yellow in the morning sunlight; and some 30 miles up the canyon toward the Painted Desert and the Navajo country stretching off toward Utah under a blanket of snow.

"Humph," finally remarked M. Andre Picard, the jokester of the French committee. "I have seen exactly the same thing in France."

"M. Picard," hastily remonstrated polite M. Louis Cast, "is up so early his eyes are only half open. He can see only half the canyon."

By this time we were inside Hotel El Tovar and at breakfast.

"I suppose," continued M. Cast, looking around at the unique mountain lodge furnishings of El Tovar, "that Picard has also seen hotels just as good as this in France."

"Of course," said Picard. "In the French Alps."

"Well, at least here is something you don't have in France," pursued Cast. "Ice water."

Picard agreed. However, as the day wore on, jokester Picard became more solemn, and at supper, perhaps thinking I had taken him seriously, he made a little speech.

"My eyes," he said, "are all the way open now, and I have seen things I never could have seen in France. Like most Frenchmen I thought that all things beautiful were in France, but today I have seen that the most beautiful thing of all is in America. I thank you for helping me to see it."

Meanwhile, other members of the French Committee were busy taking meticulous notes of what they saw and heard. And here are random jottings from the diary of a Frenchman during a day at the Grand Canyon:

"Hendrik Van Loon says that all the people in the world could be packed into a box half a mile square. If this box were then dropped into the Grand Canyon it would be so small, relatively, that it would take a searching party to find it. The Colorado River was so named because 'Colorado' means 'red.' The river is so full of silt and gravel that it is gradually washing the lands of Utah, Arizona, Wyoming and Colorado away. One million tons of silt and gravel come down the river every day. This is enough to fill a train of gondola cars stretching for 300 miles. (American gondola cars, not French. The American are three times bigger.) So much silt comes down the Colorado River that the lake in front of Boulder Dam will eventually fill up. Perhaps that is better than having all the good American soil wash down to Mexico—which is what happened before Boulder Dam was built.

"The deer are almost tame. We saw several come close to the automobile while we unloaded baggage in front of the hotel. They came up to the hotel for garbage at night. There are so many wild donkeys in the canyon that they are running the deer out. Prospectors turned their donkeys loose in the Canyon in the old days, and they are now so numerous that one year 500 had to be shot to protect the deer. The snow is four feet deep around the rim of the Canyon, but there is no snow at the bottom. It's too hot down there. The snow melts before it hits the earth. The bottom of the Canyon is so far down that the difference in temperature between the top and the bottom is about the same as the difference in temperature between Canada and Mexico.

"Seven times the Grand Canyon area was a salt sea. This is shown by the sea-water fossils geologists have discovered. In addition, the area was also a fresh-water sea, as shown by fresh-water plant fossils. Geologists figure that the land rose from a low desert to a high plateau, as at present. Then the river cut through the plateau, taking nine million years to cut the present Canyon.

"The Americans are going to have a big battle over the Grand Canyon—a battle of beauty against utility. The utility people want more water for the big Western cities and for the irrigation of farm lands. The beauty people don't want to take water away from the Colorado River and spoil the Canyon. Dams above Grand Canyon are already proposed in order to divert water under the San Francisco Mountains to the Salt River Valley. This would reduce the Colorado River to a mere trickle. We hope the beauty people win. But knowing these Americans, we bet on the utility people.
